Funny thing - I put that on AVS and the nazi moderator asked all kinds of questions: What town is it,? What's the zip code, Was there a telephone number where he could verify it and on and on.

Can you believe it? The poor guy needs to get a real life. I had a

I always do.

Yesterday, when I was floatin around in the Lowe's store, I saw some Ondura roofin material.I think that is what I will put on top of my old trailer.But first, I needs to make some roof rafters out of 2'' by 4''s.I will start on that tomorrow.

Inside of the Lowe's store, on the sound system thingy, somebody was saying,,, Somebody is needed in the wire department to cut some wire.

I was pushing my cart loaded with ten 2'' by 4''s and I was roundin a corner and there was a real purty woman shopper in a nurse uniform.
I says to her, I says,,,
Are they calling you to cut some wire?
She says,,,
I don't think so.

"...A vital element in keeping the peace is our military establishment. Our arms must be might, ready for instant action, so that no potential aggressor may be tempted to risk his own destruction. . . . American makers of plowshares could, with time and as required, make swords as well. But now we can no longer risk emergency improvisation of national defense; we have been compelled to create a permanent armaments industry of vast proportions. . . . This conjunction of an immense military establishment and a large arms industry is new in the American experience. . . .Yet we must not fail to comprehend its grave implications. . . . In the councils of government, we must guard against the acquisition of unwarranted influence, whether sought or unsought, by the military-industrial complex. The potential for the disastrous rise of misplaced power exists and will persist..."

Because when I was at the Lowe's store yesterday and flirtin with that real purty nurse lady, I got three free different pamplets about Ondura roofin.
I wants the green Ondura roofin, because I will paint the plywood sidin (I still needs to buy some plywood) white, after I get it installed on to my old trailer.

Reality check!

I have yet to respond to any post on this group in over a year, but after 34 years in high end audio (sales, technical sales training, product planning and development on three continents...) I couldn't resist...

Frequency range has very little to do with it. ANYTHING that compresses by any form of digital "bit grooming" can loose vital information. Case in point... A fairly high priced MP3 recorder/player with minidisc and computer MP3 capabilities managed to lose the bells (actually a glockenspiel, I believe) at the beginning of a Phoebe Snow track that I used as a demo for years (many other examples, but this is a case in point). Digital compression can lose textures, details, imaging, transient information in ways that is COMPLETELY foreign to the human psycho-acoustic mechanism. Our ears and brain can "fill in" information lost by anything as natural and simple as bandwidth limiting, BECAUSE IT HAPPENS IN NATURE ALL THE TIME! If we, as a species, have had to deal with bandwidth limiting by something as simple as distance or intervening materials such as a drape or some walls, etc., WE HAVE ACHIEVED THE ABILITY TO RECONSTRUCT THE MISSING HARMONIC INFORMATION. And we can pull information out of the noise floor of analog recordings by dithering.

I used one of the few decks that can trump all of those mentioned above (although the Nakamichi units were excellent), the Tandberg 3014A, and have been able to produce recordings that (on over $60,000.00 of amps and speakers) rivaled the very best digital technology available at the time (2005 or so), and was only lacking compared to an excellent virgin vinyl LP on $10,000 worth of turntable.

As for bandwidth and digital technology... Anything that has a bit rate as high as SACD or Meridian lossless packing on DVD Audio can produce a bandwidth of 50 kHz and beyond. And that is your best hope of achieving a recording that can compete with high end analog, PERIOD! I have some SACD remasters of mid-1960 Rolling Stones recordings that sound BETTER than the British virgin vinyl recordings of the exact same performances. Of course, digital is quieter, but I've already mentioned that we can dither significant information that is below the noise floor in an analog recording. The "noise floor" in a digital recording is the point of no return. NOTHING exists there, it's all truncated. Ignored!

I know of NO MP3 device that can compete with the best Tandberg, Nakamichi, Harman Kardon 400 series CD recorder regardless of the bit rate. THEY DO NOT EXIST!

And a truly audiophile turntable with a moving coil cartridge can trump any of the above in most respects, but that's another subject...

LOL, nobody sane thinks that anyone really believes that.

That's what's so funny!!!

Well, I going to guess because they're both white, and one of his (Obama, just in case you got confused) parents was obviously not white, and his mother was white, so you try to figure it out if you can.

Hawaii (With a Republican Governor) has confirmed the BC posted online is valid, so game over for you birthtards. The birth announcement in the paper is just added nails into you birthtard's skulls. The hospital where he was born said he was born there, and it goes on and on. You poor birthtards seem to have some agenda behind your doubts as to where he was born. I wonder what that might be...hmmm? (Scratching my chin and pondering what makes a birthtard a birthtard)?

You must be shitting yourself, since you haven't seen Reagan's, Bush I's, Clinton's (His name was Blythe when I was born, I think), and W's BC, long or short form, either, so how do you know they were "natural born" Americans? I would imagine you never saw any BC of any other POTUS either, did you? You never gave a second thought about where they were born, did you? Again, I wonder why......hmmmmmm.

And you wonder why I, and hundreds of millions of other people laugh at you birthtards?

You do give the gift of laughter though, so you aren't totally worthless. And eventually, you should make some fine worm food.

I haven't lied about anything, except my name. Unless you consider my goofing on you a "lie". But you make it so hard to resist...

You must read and/or type, very very slowly, if you think I spend a lot of time posting.

ROTFL. She's real Telemundoh, is a child shrink, and lives less than 8 hours away from you.

LOL, you poor birthtard. Almost nothing beats a raving birthtard in a whackjob contest. I'm not even in the same universe as you are.

I will be interviewed on air by The South African Radio League's (SARL) ARMI amateur radio mirror international on Sunday July 5th at 0800UTC/zulu.

See http://www.amateurradio.org.za/armi.htm
Best frequency is the Sentech Meyerton 50 Kw transmitter on 7205 kHz

This should easily be picked up in Europe, but may be more of a challenge for my American friends when the broadcast is in the wee hours of the morning and the signal may not propagate.

Heh, yesterday I was clamping a top rear board across the top rear of my old trailer, getting ready to drill some pilot holes for three inch long screws.I stepped back and I looked at it, it looked like it was on there crooked.Trailer has two axels and four wheels.I already knew the left rear main leaf spring was sagging too much, but I had forgotten about that.I jacked that rear corner of my trailer up, the board looked alright then.Each wheel has it's own set of springs and there is a cantilever link (or whatever it is called) attatched between the spring sets on each side of the trailer.I can remove the spring(s) and take them to a local spring shop and have them re-arched as good as new.I think I will buy some 4'' by 4''s and wedge them between the axels and the bottom of the trailer frame.I am not going to be hauling that old trailer around anywhere anyway.Soon as I finish up with enclosing the trailer, it will serve as a storage shed for my 1914 T Model Ford car.

The key is not the codec for playback. The key is how it was recorded to begin with, preferably DSD. After that the best playback medium of DSD recordings are SACDs. THERE IS NOTHING CLOSER THAN SACD/DSD TO THE ORIGINAL MASTER STUDIO RECORDINGS - period. End of discussion.

Maybe so but the price is prohibitive except for the elite billionaire.

For far, far less dinero a very decent SA-CD player, a modest 5.1
channel surround sound amplifier, and 5 mid-priced full range speakers and subwoofer will equal the best mucho dinero mega-bucks elite vinyl sound system TO THE VAST MAJORITY of listeners.

A very good Universal SACD/CD/DVD player can be had for for $200-$600
A very good 5.1 / 7.1 channel home theatre amplifier can be had for $1000-$2000
A very good set of 5 indentical full-range speakers can be had for about $2500 used (recommended on a budget) or at least double for new speakers.
A very good subwoofer for about $1000.

TOTAL for an very good "audiophile system for the rest of us" - less than $10,000.
And if you are prudent you can do it for half that price. (Used audiophile speakers are a bargain.) Well within reach of most "working" music lovers.

If you are foolish enough to spent money on a vinyl LP system and expect to surpass the above $5K-$10K system than you had better take on a second or third job.
Marry into a wealthy family. Pray and play the lottery or rob a bank -

Hi all I use an Dressler ARA 30 active antenna, how ever the PSU that I used to power it 12V has gone belly up and in doing so it has melted a resistor inside the little box that comes with the antenna.
Inside the box are 2 caps and 1 resistor, I can not get any colour code from it due to the damage so I cant simply replace it.

Does any one know what this resistor could be please?

TIA,

Mike.

The "Pledge of Allegiance" was the origin of the "Nazi" salute and robotic chanting to flags in government's schools, where segregation was imposed by law, and racism was taught as official policy. See the video at http://www.youtube.com/watch?v=BssWWZ3XEe4

America's most notorious and lasting propagandists for "Military Socialism" and "National Socialism": Edward Bellamy and Francis Bellamy (author of the "Pledge of Allegiance" in 1892).

In the United States and elsewhere, America's stiff-arm salute began to spread outside of the Pledge of Allegiance to the flag. The gesture was directed toward government officials who were often on stage with the flag at mass meetings where the Pledge was led.

Bellamy's pledge was the origin of the stiff-arm salute adopted later by the National Socialist German Workers Party, as shown in the work of the symbologist Dr. Rex Curry (author of "Pledge of Allegiance Secrets"). http://rexcurry.net/pledge-allegiance-pledge-allegiance2.jpg

By 1915, National Socialism in the USA had inspired propagandistic presentations of the American flag posed favorably with a swastika and the phrase "May our glorious flag and this lucky star guide you and keep you wherever you are." http://rexcurry.net/swastika-flag2.JPG

Another piece of propaganda from the USA bears a swastika and the wording: "Lucky Star - May this emblem protect you well from every bullet, every shell." http://rexcurry.net/45th-infantry-protect-from-bullet-shell.jpg

Before WWI, one of America's leading propagandists for government was Edward Bernays. Bernays openly sought to use social psychology, political persuasion and advertising to construct “necessary illusions” which were fed to the masses as “reality.” Bernays described it as “engineering of consent.” The objective for Bernays was to show government, government schools and government-regulated media outlets how to gain control. http://rexcurry.net/swastika-nazi-sozi-goebbels.html

In 1917, Edward Bernays and Walter Lippman helped Woodrow Wilson break his campaign promises and con Americans into WWI. To that end they used the Committee on Public Information (CPI) also known as the Creel Committee. They helped Wilson foment anti-German hate during WWI. Of course, WWI led to WWII and so forth, ad infinitum, ad nauseum. http://rexcurry.net/45th-infantry-division-swastika-sooner-soldiers.html

Bernays also created the war slogan “Make the World Safe for Democracy” -a patriotic mantra that many stupid Americans embraced just as they had earlier embraced Bellamy's "Pledge of Allegiance," America's straight-arm gesture, and mechanical chanting to flags in mass and on cue.

Bernays and Bellamy used the technique of manufacturing ever-present dangers and then maintaining a constant state of fear by generating false government pronouncements that endlessly re-stated and exagerated the threat. The modus operandi for Bernays and Bellamy was to give those in power greater control over what Bernay's called "the mass mind."

Bernays’ books "Crystallizing Public Opinion" (1923) and "Propaganda" (1928) impressed Joseph Goebbels, the propaganda minister for the National Socialist German Workers Party. Germany mimicked American behavior because Goebbels learned from the behavior of Bernays, President Wilson, and the U.S. government during World War I. http://rexcurry.net/swastika3swastika.jpg

In 1933, Bernays met Karl von Weigand (a German journalist) who informed Bernays that Goebbels was using Bernays' work for Goebbels' propaganda campaigns fomenting hate, robotic chanting, straight-arm salutes, the use of government schools, children, and more. http://rexcurry.net/swastika-nazi-sozi-goebbels.html

Socialists in other countries wanted to know how to brainwash a nation. It was the same brainwashing dogma behind the Wholecaust (of which the Holocaust was a part): ~20 million dead under the National Socialist German Workers' Party; ~60 million dead under the Union of Soviet Socialist Republics; ~50 million dead under the Peoples' Republic of China.

"If I approach the masses with reasoned arguments, they will not understand me," Hitler noted in Mein Kampf, "In the mass meeting, their reasoning power is paralysed. What I say is like an order given under hypnosis."

To this day, laws continue to order children to hypnotically chant in the Pledge of Allegiance ritual each morning in many schools in the USA. Only the gesture has changed.

Here is a video example from the World War II era. http://www.youtube.com/watch?v=xipJGXUWjTU

Bernays' work continued as one of the engineers of the Cold War.

CFRX, Toronto, Canada, on 6070 at 0520 UTC in English. Relaying CFRB on 1010. M interviewing curator of museum featuring vintage aircraft. SIO-354, much better than //1010. This signal on 6070 varies greatly during the day, but this time slot usually produces the best signal. (Bryant-KY, Sony ICF-2010, July 4)

Barnyard Radio, US Pirate, on 6930 at 0545-0610+ UTC in English. Virtually non-stop eclectic music mix, including mx from Black Sabbath, Black Flag (punk), and several songs with silly lyrics that I've never heard before. M announcer with IDs between songs. SIO-343, peaking at about 0555 and fading afterwards. Still going at 0610 tuneout. (Bryant-KY, Eton E1XM, July4)

R. Australia, Brandon, Australia on 9660 at 0615 UTC in English. Two M with live Australian Football League coverage. //12080, also Brandon. SIO-343, much better than //12080. (Bryant-KY, Eton E1XM, Sony ICF-2010, July 4)

R. New Zealand Int'l, Rangitaiki, New Zealand on 11725 at 0533 in English. YL interviewing accented M abt elections, constitution and parliament. SIO-243, but seemed to be improving. (Bryant-KY, Eton E1XM, July 4)

R. New Zealand Int'l, Rangitaiki, New Zealand on 6170 at 0955 in English. Program of vintage music until TOH, then ID by YL, into NZ news by same lady. Several items about swine flu deaths in New Zealand. SIO-353+, very listenable. (Bryant-KY, Eton E1XM, Sony ICF-2010, July 4)

Hi,
Sorry about freq., I listen on vintage tube radios with only approximate display!

Radio Korea International Pyongyang
Saturday morning July 4th.
09:30-09:58 GMT (03:55 AM Pacific Daylight Time)
Somewhere close to 11.55 MHz
SINPO 35343

Announcer read the entire English schedule for the North Korean SW station shortly before signing off, the schedule was read from 09:56 to 09:58 GMT.

I didn't have recorder handy, but...

...if this time slot is daily feature, then here could be a place to hear their up to date schedules during this missile crises.

From 09:30-09:50 a Korean patriotic opera was heard where soloists and choir sing praises to current socialist government with announcer commenting (favorably) in English between each passage.

You are right that Romania seems to be coming in very clearly as of late. Their broadcast in English on 9580 at 0000 UTC sounds awesome here in KY. Last night, I was scanning 31 meters with my E1 about 0620 UTC when I encountered a good signal on 9740 with a man speaking with an English accent. I thought that maybe BBC-Singapore was on for a special broadcast, but I was surpised to eventually hear an RRI ID. Romania's broadcasts sound very good!

the idea of stamping out narcotics use stands alongside alcohol prohibition as being probably the two most idiotic concepts that have ever been conceived by crypto big-government homosexual control freaks who can't stand to see other people do what they want to do.

They asked me how I got into DXing and what had kept me at it for so many years (43). And how was I finding DX on the shortwave bands now.

Hi Burr,
I can't condense a twenty minute talk into a few lines, so try and listen. It may be possible for you to get the broadcast on Monday at 1905z on 3215 kHz. Or they have a "Listen on the web link" on their webpage http://www.amateurradio.org.za/armi.htm but it only appears actually when it is on air.

If all that fails the talk really has content along the lines of my profile at http://www.dxing.info/about/dxers/plimmer.dx

I caught the pirate station Barnyard Radio broadcasting for the second time in the last 24 hours. They were on 6925 between 0200 - 0215 UTC. I tuned in at 0200 to a program that was already running. They had a rambling recording of a man critiquing the logic behind the war on terrorism, with light background music. Slowly the music faded out and was replaced with the crowd noise from an anti-war protest that eventually drowned out the man speaking. Followed by some music that I can only describe as thrasher metal. Man with a canned ID and off at 0215 UTC. SIO-454, pretty strong, not local, but not too far away. (Bryant-KY, Eton E1, July5)

Pity! Sorry about that - it was on air on 7205 kHz from 0836z to 0850z.
Even though I say so myself, it was quite a nice interview.

They said it would also be available on the web, but I couldn't get that to work.

Yeah, I heard that. I cannot remember in my lifetime, during a two week period, where "celebrities" were dying.

I wonder who is next? My guess, at least from reports, would be Patrick Swayze.

Ousted President Manuel Zelaya has committed 18 criminal acts including treason and failing to implement more than 80 laws approved by the Honduras Congress since taking office in 2006.

The military ousted Zelaya with the backing of Honduras' political establishment, including the Supreme Court, Congress and Zelaya's own party!

Honduras' influential Cardinal Oscar Rodriguez, the highest ranking Catholic Church official in the country, went on national television to urge the exiled president not to come back.

"We think that a return to the country at this time could unleash a bloodbath in the country," Cardinal Rodriguez said. "To this day, no Honduran has died. Please meditate because afterwards it would be too late."

The prelate also criticized Mr. Zelaya, suggesting the Church was throwing its weight behind the provisional government. "The day of your swearing in, you clearly quoted the three commandments of the sacred law of God: Not to lie, not to steal, and not to kill," said the Cardinal, who was seen as a leading candidate to succeed the late Pope John Paul II.

Hey - It's interesting that after I emailed Savage and Prometheus Radio (they are working with Congress to protect LPFMs from the NAB), that I never got a response from either of them.
Nice of Bob to share his complaint to the FCC about WBZ, though. I have a real feeling that non-HD stations might be waiting for the results of the FM-HD power increase, before taking legal action, like filing a class-action suit against the FCC, iBiquity, HD Radio Alliance, Harris, etc. God knows, I've surely had many visits from Congress, Congressional Quartery, the DOJ, the FCC, D.C. FCC-related activist groups and law firms to my blog:

I wants to buy me one of them FEIN Multimaster power tools, (7 Tools in 1, DirecTV Infomercial on channel 270) but dang that price tag! about three hundred and fifty sumpin dollars.
I don't want a Sears electric hammer because I hate battery powered tools.I can swing a hammer all day long.

I guess Michael W. Bryant wasn't BS'ing (Bryant Sierra) us when he said he was going to be working at or for a new place!

In a stunning move, the dufi at Louisville Technical Institute have changed their name!

It is now the Sullivan College of Technology & Design!

And, as always, don't let your children attend the Sullivan College of Technology & Design.

They've hired at least one dufus who once claimed to have a PhD, and who knows, there may be more dufi there.

A few minutes ago, Paul Gallo www.supertalkms.com said Nancy Reagan is 88 years old today.

One time Ronald Reagan told somebody nuke missiles sent out from U.S.Submarines can be recalled.

N'Awlins wants Brad Pitt (''the movies'') for Mayor, of N'Awlins.

Angelea McGlowan was a guest speaker on Paul Gallo's radio talk show this morning.She is a Very Smart gal.

At least you managed to get one statement correct - you are not that interesting! And you admit that you had a drink at your favourite gay bar. I hope you do know that having fantasies that others are gay is a sign of your own repressed homosexuality.

Don't be afraid to admit who you truly are and you won't have to come up with conspiracies anymore.

Telemundoh! needs to come out of the closet and come to grip with himself. I'm sure that Burr had a good reason for posting the link that he did and making sure that Telemundoh took note of it.

By taking part in one of these studies Tele would actually be doing good for a change; the gift card is a good idea, though!

I have one. Bought it in December of 2007. I read the review of it in Passport to World Band Radio before I committed.
They really nailed it.

The good:

Cheap. $50
200 memories.
Great sensitivity.
Decent selectivity.
Compact (a deck of 3 x 5 cards). Excellent for travel.
Batteries last a very long time (you probably don't need the AC adapter).
Good MW DXing.
FM stereo with headphones. (Throw away the earbuds, buy Sony MDRs) Alarm.
Clock. (I set mine to UTC) Adequate display light. (Could be better)
Variable sleep timer.
Large frequency display.
Good sound for the size.

The bad:
Keys are very hard to press.
FM is marginal.
Volume control is discrete (buttons not a wheel) with little choice.
Single conversion. Lots of images.
No SSB.
Battery cover not hinged, comes fully off, take care not to lose it.

I bought it hoping the sunspot cycle would take off quickly.
It didn't. Reception here, mid continent (Denver), is marginal at best. I took it back east and it works great there.
Went through airport securing fine.

I do get Australia and New Zealand here. It works about as well as my Sony ICF-2002 ($200 in 1986, only 10 memories).
Works well with external antenna. I have alligator clips but just placing the whip antenna close to the clip works just as well. Sometimes better. Less noise. It's that sensitive.

If they would put a wheel for volume, I'd buy another one.
The keys aren't a problem if they last a good long time.
I've had too many things with sticking keys.

I've yet to take it backpacking but I'll bet it will be great.

Still waiting for the sun to get active.

Not at all. The kooktard mind, such as it is, of the type that you possess with your belief in the BC nonsense and persecution complex, subscribes to all sorts of wild comspiracies. A fear of RFIDS would be in line with delusions.

The conspiracy k00ks never just stick to one conspiracy. It's the BC conspiracy, the upcoming persecution of Xians by the government, black helicopters patrolling the country, RFIDS, UFO's, fluoride in the water, and so on. These nutcases are crazy beyond all belief!

Just wait until all the mental health programs get cut in California for budgetary reasons. The kooktards will only get worse and there will alot more of them.

So name a conspiracy that BDK has put forth on this newsgroup. You can't do it, can you?

You, OTOH, like the BC nonsense and have the upcoming Xian persecution by the gov't. You win by a landslide in the disturbed mind category.

I wonder if his cabal of armchair politicos and economicists all subscribe to the BC k00ktardery. Telemundoh claims to have friends but there would have to be a common link for the group. To be a fly on the wall during those conversations ...

Darn it, John, now I have to consider getting a DX 1 Pro Mk II. I've read up on the DX 1 and grounding seems to be a critical issue with getting your $$$ from the unit. If I may ask, what sort of ground system are you using with it and was it a big deal to get a good ground.

Thank you!

Hi JB - the grounding is necessary to help suppress local RFI and ensure a good radio ground for top performance. Mine is just a copper strap about 8 ft long buried under nine inches of soil = nothing elaborate.

Considering my poor QTH the DX1 has been a top performer over the years.

His obsession with thinking other people are gay is very odd, but fits in with being a birthtard.

My ex really wants to talk to him in person, the whole birthtard thing fascinates her more than almost anything she's done in her entire career. If she ever does meet him face to face, I hope she doesn't giggle like she did on the phone last week. Telemundoh wouldn't care for that much, I suspect.

We Are the Authentic Representatives of the People, Says Honduras' Interim Leader

http://www.cnsnews.com/public/content/article.aspx?RsrcID=50558

Hands Off Honduras!

Last Saturday, Honduran soldiers marched into the presidential palace, bundled up President Manuel Zelaya and put him on a plane for Costa Rica.

The ouster had been ordered by the Supreme Court and approved by the Congress, as Zelaya was attempting an illegal referendum to change the Honduran constitution so he could run for another term.

Will someone please explain why this bloodless transfer of power to the civilian legislator first in line for the presidency, in a sovereign nation, is any business of the United Nations, the Organization of American States, Hugo Chavez, the Castro brothers or Barack Obama? For all have denounced the "coup" and demanded Zelaya's immediate return.

The hypocrisy here is astounding.

Chavez was imprisoned for his bloody coup attempt in Venezuela in 1992. And to have Fidel Castro's dictatorship of half a century denouncing a glitch in the democratic process of a Western Hemisphere republic is beyond parody.

What percentage of the 200 member nations of that septic tank of anti-Americanism, the United Nations, are democracies? How many leaders of its member states came to power through free and fair elections?

And what happened to the idea of non-intervention in the internal affairs of Western Hemisphere republics? At this writing, Honduras is not buckling.

"We have established a democratic government, and we will not cede to pressure from anyone. We are a sovereign country," said Roberto Micheletti, who was named caretaker president to serve out Zelaya's term, which ends this year.

Unlike Tehran, where hundreds of thousands protested the election, the streets of Tegucigalpa have remained calm. No one has been shot, beaten with clubs or run down by thugs on motorcycles.

Just whose side is Barack on in Latin America?

Though elected as a center-right candidate, Zelaya has moved into the orbit of Chavez, whose idea it was to change the Honduran constitution to get Zelaya another term. Hugo even provided the ballots. In Latin America, term limits have been written into constitutions to prevent a return to the time of the dictators and presidents-for-life. The folks who put Zelaya aboard that plane are friends of the United States.

Why are Obama and Hillary Clinton meddling in the affairs of a friendly country, to dump over a friendly government, to reinstate a friend of Hugo's, whose goal is to bring Honduras into his anti-American "Bolivarian Revolution"?

Like Barack's strange behavior in Trinidad, where he grinned away as Chavez handed him an anti-American tract, then listened for an hour to Daniel Ortega berate us for cruelty to Castro's Cuba, without protest or retort, Obama is coming off as one who shares the international left's view of the United States.

There is another issue raised by Obama's denunciation of our friends in Honduras. Does he put ideology ahead of U.S. national interests? Does he prefer hostile democracies to friendly autocrats?

What comes first with Obama?

"He may be an SOB, but he's our SOB," FDR said of one Latin dictator. What FDR meant was that, in those grave times when Adolf Hitler, Benito Mussolini, Joseph Stalin and Japanese militarists ruled most of Eurasia, America must take her friends where she could find them.

In World War II, we welcomed the alliance with Generalissimo Chiang Kai-shek, and the neutrality of the autocrats of Madrid and Lisbon. We partnered with Stalin. Gen. Eisenhower cut a deal with Vichy's Adm. Darlan to get GIs safely ashore in North Africa.

From 1961 to 1979, Park Chung-hee was an authoritarian ruler of South Korea who sent 50,000 troops to fight beside ours in Vietnam. Was he not a better friend than Olof Palme of Sweden, Pierre Trudeau of Canada and Willy Brandt of Germany, who burnished their democratic credentials by scoring points off the United States?

For most Cold War presidents, U.S. national interests always trumped democratist ideology. Ike preferred the Shah to the democratically elected Mohammad Mossadegh. Richard Nixon preferred Gen. Pinochet to the elected Salvador Allende.

Even George Bush, who had pushed for Palestinian elections and insisted on Hamas' inclusion, perhaps because he thought they would lose, did a somersault when Hamas won.

How to explain the universality of the attacks on Honduras—when few United Nations members outside the West condemned Tehran and Hugo Chavez rushed to congratulate Mahmoud Ahmadinejad—other than the fact that this "coup" removed an adversary of the United States?

Anti-Americans stand by their own, no matter how they came to power, or retain power. Only in the West do we seem always prepared to abandon our flawed friends who do not measure up.

This is a formula for eventually not having any friends.

That Obama finds himself in camp with Castro’s Cuba, Ortega’s Nicaragua and Chavez, who is openly threatening Honduras, should tell him something about where his ideology is taking him, and us.

One day, Obama is going to have to decide whether he wishes to be the darling of the international left or the unapologetic leader of the nation that is most resented and reviled by the international left.

If he went off the deep end about RFIDS it would be, well, it would be really really great, and proof that his condition is terminal insanity.

Early onset Alzheimer's would be a likely cause.

Scary. I think the Governator needs to declare a state of emergency and place the kooktards under the control of the National Guard. A Kooktard City could be erected very quickly from tents on an old AF base, and the kooktards taken into custody and placed there, for their own protection, and the public's too, of course.

They could have an "Open Mike" show, live, direct from Kookersville, every night, where they could rave about the BC, RFIDs, and of course, the jews, generating ratings and huge $$$. I bet Telemundoh would be one of the most popular residents there.

Maybe they could have a "secret" escape plan, where the poor kooktards would plot and plan to escape the entire season, not knowing everyone outside Kookersville knew all about it. The look on their faces when it goes wrong would be priceless.

Oh well, it's as likely to happen as Telemundoh's Obama BC stuff is true.

I'm surprised he's not been copying and pasting those whackjob claims

The chopper stuff is just weird, even for religious whackjobs. Why would the govmint chop heads off? There are a lot more efficient ways to execute people..

I have a couple of very conservative friends, and they believe in some odd stuff, but a mention of the birthtards causes a lot of chuckles. If he does have birthtard friends, it must be some sort of "cluster" like a cancer cluster, except insanity is the result.

Time for a telethon.

Let's see, Labor Day is taken, so April Fools day would fit in so many ways. There must be a celebrity birthtard they can get to host it, but I'm not aware of any celeb birthtards, so far. They could come on, and play heartbreaking clips where some birthtard's wife or whatever says, "Everything was so wonderful, we had a happy family, and then, in Sept, 08, it happened. The man I have loved for over 20 years was gone, and in his place was someone, some thing I didn't even know. He had turned into a birthtard!! I was devastated, the kids asked me, "Mom, what's wrong with Dad? I....I had to tell them that (sobs) their father had an extreme case of birthtardery!!My little girl climbed into bed with me and we held each other and cried all night. The worst part is that John doesn't think anything is wrong, but he spends all night, every night, online with the other people who have developed this awful disease, raving about Obama being born in Kenya. He's so sick, but he won't do anything to help himself!! There are times I think about taking the kids and leaving, but you don't leave someone because they have become ill, even if it's a mental illness, not a physical one!!!"

That would be a classic.

I haven't been listening to my marching order from El Presidente lately, but according to the schedule, they still have English broadcasts.

For the record, I don't think I even caught RHC in a lie. They slant the news of course, but nothing untrue. In fact, Fox News should be so honest.

India's capital, Delhi, is also reeling from depleted water supplies, while many towns and villages across the country still have woefully inadequate safe drinking water facilities.

They depend largely on bore wells, which have seriously depleted the country's water table.

The BBC's Zubair Ahmed in Mumbai says farm produce is also likely to be badly affected if the full monsoon does not arrive soon.

I gave up on RCI years ago... Time was I used to listen regularly (especially the weekend programs) and it was time well spent! They had some great offerings and they were first class. Unfortunately, their end has come and gone! Now... everytime they send me the new program guide I just flip it into the dust bin without a second thought.

And I feel the same with regard to Radio Netherlands too!

Considering how radical the views of RHC are, it wasn't often that I found them in outright lies. On one occasion though, probably within the last decade, when they were receiving heat for jailing their dissidents, one commentator (no way to remember who) said that Cuba didn't have political prisoners but the US did. Yes that would be a lie.

Once in a while you learn some interesting truthiness from RHC. You may recall Cuba cut the electricity to US Embassy in Cuba. [It's not really an Embassy since we don't have relations with Cuba. Rather, it is a diplomatic mission, but you get the idea..] On the surface, that sounded kind of nasty. However, RHC mentioned they had photos of the electric billboard outside the embassy that had some nasty stuff about El Presidente.

The US has a few political prisoners, but I suspect Cuba has more.

Short answer is no -> never on SW, but when I lived in Joburg there was a classic FM station that played lovely music like that.

I'm a newsaholic and listen mostly to talk shows and news programs.

I guess that tune reminded you of your Irish girlfriend.
Enjoy the music

I was hoping after reading this thread, that the mystery would be solved. I thought I was just missing them (the english transmissions).

I still, to this day, get literature (propaganda) from them. I wonder if they have a "do not mail list." ;-)

They may have cut back on English to devote more transmitter time to Spanish due to the crisis in Honduras.

What is that nazi crap song? they sing in the Robert Mitchum Curt Jurgens movie, The Devil Below.
Curt slaps Heinie and says, Sing it Heinie!

The same same theme music (if you can call that crap music? I call it Crap.We stomped that nazi crap out of those nazis in World War Two) is in The Battle of the Bulge Henry Fonda Robert Shaw movie which was on teevee this morning.

Curt Jurgens was a Good guy.He protested leetle Adolph Hitler's nazi crap.Curt Jurgens sat out World War Two in a nazi klink.

It's very simple really-

If /everybody/ participates in the fraud, then nobody has the right to object to any government solution, no matter how expensive or ridiculous.

And (as luck would have it) Barney Frankfurter is an expert in both the expensive and the ridiculous.

Coming Through Obama’s Bureaucratic Back Door

I hope you all had a great 4th of July. I also hope you had some patriotic renewal and re-connection to the unique freedoms that we enjoy as Americans – for now.

We’ve been reporting that many of these freedoms are under attack by Obama, Pelosi and Reid, who want to kill Talk Radio. They said so during the elections and transition, but they realized they were tripping alarms when they ran their mouth – so they stopped talking.

Now they’ll be using subversive, back-door bureaucratic tactics. They imposed a gag order on Genachowski, their nominee for FCC Chairman, preventing him from talking substance during his confirmation hearing – a Democratic love fest. Then, to stay under the radar, Harry Reid maneuvered Genachowski’s confirmation through the Senate – WITHOUT EVEN A VOTE!

Get used to it. Al Franken has arrived to give Harry Reid an automatic Super Majority in the Senate and Obama has a majority on the FCC. Here is what’s next:

Strike 1 – the FCC Diversity Sub-Committee will start writing regulations to redistribute station ownership to minorities;

Strike 2 – the Congress and FCC will begin writing rules for “Local Content” requirements, to force radio coverage of left wing views – even if there is scant listener interest for it in local communities;

Strike 3 – Democrats in Congress will start writing new legislation taxing radio spectrum to pay for Obama’s socialized medicine program.

... and Talk Radio is OUT. The mainstream media won’t bring you this news because they can’t afford reporters to cover it, don’t understand the nuance, or are too busy cutting their own deals.

But at UnFairAir – we’ll get the word out. We have the tools: the Internet and radio. Let’s use them.

Sorry for the bad news on the threats to freedom of speech – after a holiday where we celebrate freedom. But there you have it. Please get the word out.

In the meantime, stay tuned.

Regards,

Roger Hedgecock

Radio America host and former Mayor of San Diego, California

perhaps pelosi was telling the truth, will the conservatives and republicans apologize?i doubt it:House Intelligence Committee said the head of the CIA admitted the agency misled Congress since 2001 about significant actions

http://www.bloomberg.com/apps/news?pid=20601110&sid=ah8z1B.aYuBA

CIA Admits It Misled Congress in Past, Lawmakers Say (Update1)

By James Rowley

July 8 (Bloomberg) -- Six Democrats on the U.S. House Intelligence Committee said the head of the CIA admitted the agency misled Congress since 2001 about “significant actions.”

In a letter to CIA Director Leon Panetta, the six members said he had “recently” testified that “top CIA officials have concealed significant actions from all members of Congress” and “misled members” from 2001 until this week.

The letter, released today, didn’t describe what CIA actions were at issue. House Speaker Nancy Pelosi and House Republicans have been feuding over her claim that the CIA misled Congress in 2002 about harsh interrogations of suspected terrorists.

The letter called on Panetta to “publicly correct” his May 15 statement that “it is not our policy or practice to mislead Congress.”

Separately, the House committee’s chairman, Democrat Silvestre Reyes of Texas, said in a statement tonight that “in rare instances’’ CIA officers “have not adhered to the high standards’’ that the agency sets for “truthfulness in reporting’’ to Congress.

Praise for Panetta

Reyes, who wasn’t among the six lawmakers who signed the letter to Panetta, praised the CIA chief’s “recent efforts to bring issues to the committee’s attention’’ that “had not been previously conveyed’’ to it.

Reyes was blunter in a July 7 letter to the panel’s top Republican, saying that the CIA had lied to the committee at least once.

Information Panetta gave the panel June 24 “brought to light significant information on the inadequacy of reporting to the committee,’’ Reyes wrote to Representative Pete Hoekstra of Michigan.

The information provided by Panetta “led me to conclude that this committee has been misled, has not been provided full and complete notification and (in at least once case) was affirmatively lied to,’’ Reyes said in a letter, first reported by Congressional Quarterly.

The disclosures came on the eve of a scheduled House debate on an intelligence spending measure. It would expand the number of lawmakers who must be notified of covert intelligence operations from eight congressional leaders to more than 35 members of House and Senate intelligence panels.

Pelosi’s Charge

In May, Pelosi charged that when she was a member of the House intelligence panel, the spy agency gave her misleading and inaccurate information whether it had waterboarded suspected terrorists. The CIA has acknowledged that it used the interrogation technique on three detainees suspected of being al-Qaeda operatives to simulate the sensation of drowning.

House Republican Leader John Boehner of Ohio has challenged Pelosi to either produce evidence to support her claim or retract her assertion that the CIA “misrepresented every step of the way” its use of harsh interrogation techniques on suspected terrorists.

The lawmakers’ letter said Panetta’s recent testimony disclosed concealment by the CIA that is “similar to other deceptions of which we are aware from other recent periods.” The intelligence committee regularly receives private briefings from U.S. officials.

CIA spokesman George Little said in a statement that Panetta “stands by his May 15 statement” because “it is not the policy or practice of the CIA to mislead Congress” and that “Director Panetta’s actions back that up.”
The agency went to the panel with the new information, the agency’s statement said.
“As the letter from these six representatives notes, it was the CIA that took the initiative to notify the oversight committees,” Little said.
The letter was signed by Democrats Anna Eshoo of California, John Tierney of Massachusetts, Rush Holt of New Jersey, Mike Thompson of California, Alcee Hastings of Florida and Jan Schakowsky of Illinois.

Sarah Palin: Out, but not down
Wed Jul 8, 7:05 pm ET
You betcha Sarah Palin is still a viable presidential candidate! Even though the governor of Alaska dropped the bombshell last week that she was leaving her post, a new USA TODAY/Gallup Poll finds that her support among Republicans is still strong. In fact, her resignation seems to have even slightly boosted her among GOP constituents. According to the nationwide poll, close to 67% of Republicans want Palin to be "a major national political figure" in the future. And 71% of them say they would likely vote for her if she ran for president in 2012. Top Republican consultant Mary Matalin called Palin's move "brilliant," and conservative talk-show host Bill Bennett went on CNN to discuss the surprisingly high number of viewers who called into his show in support of Palin's decision.
"To political pros [Palin's resignation] may be a problem. To the base, I'm not sure it's a problem at all," Bennett told CNN. And Bennett may be exactly right. Just as Republicans as a whole are unfazed by Palin's move, the poll shows Democrats and Independents are as unhappy with her as they were before, with 75% of Democrats and 55% of independents preferring she leave the national stage altogether. According to USA TODAY, public opinion of Palin has become so polarized that her surprise announcement did little to change anyone's feelings: Seven out of 10 people say their views weren't affected at all.
GOP consultant Alex Castellanos seconded Bennett's sentiment. He told USA TODAY:

"For Independents and Democrats, she's already not their candidate, and with Republicans her support is not based on her record as governor of Alaska."
But what would bring about such stark polarization between the parties? Some would argue that it was Palin's in-your-face attitude and all-too publicized blunders that ultimately posited her as an inexperienced and unviable candidate. But Palin, in her resignation speech, blamed the media, calling its coverage of her a "superficial, wasteful, political bloodsport." And Republicans echo Palin's complaints of media mistreatment. According to the poll, 75% of the GOP believes coverage of Palin has been unfairly negative. Dana Oshiro of ReadWriteWeb.com opines that the Web is also to blame. "It's the Internet that ignited the tournament of torment," she writes. From viral videos of "Palin drag shows" to ubiquitous photos of Palin Halloween costumes, the ex-governor became the "Internet's comic relief in an environment that might have otherwise been staunch."
Whether Palin has been unfairly portrayed in the media continues to be a hotly debated issue. But one thing seems to be certain: She has established herself as an American media fixture, loved and loathed by either side of the aisle.

Prophet Jesus and The Da Vinci Code

This article appeared in a Magazine Radiance NewsWeekly.

We reproduce this article for the Readers of The True Call
DR. MUZAMMIL H. SIDDIQI clarifies the position of Prophet Jesus in the light of the Qur��n and calls upon Muslims to use this opportunity to inform others about Islamic position about Jesus, peace be upon him.

Say ye: "We believe in Allah, and the revelation given to us, and to Abraham, Isma'il, Isaac, Jacob, and the Tribes, and that given to Moses and Jesus, and that given to (all) Prophets from their Lord: we make no difference between one and another of them: and we bow to Allah (in Islam)." (Al-Baqarah 2:136)

Behold! the angels said: "O Mary! Allah giveth Thee glad tidings of a Word from Him: his name will be Christ Jesus, the son of Mary, held in honour in this world and the Hereafter and of (the company of) those nearest to Allah. (Al 'Imran 3:45) We believe in all the Prophets and Messengers of Allah. We respect and honor all of them without any discrimination. We believe that all Prophets preached the message of Tawhid (monotheism) and all of them invited human beings to worship Allah alone and to live righteous life. Prophet Muhammad "peace be upon him- was not the only Prophet of God, but he was the last and final Prophet of God. Prophet Muhammad is not the founder of Islam; all Prophets submitted to God (Muslims) and followed the way of submission to God (Islam). We believe that Jesus was one of the great prophets of God. In the Qur��n he is called "Isa. He is also known as al-Masih (the Christ) and Ibn Maryam (Son of Mary). He has many other honorable names and titles in the Qur��n. He is a highly respected religious figure. Every Muslim believes in him, honours him and loves him. His mother is also highly respected, loved and honoured. There are hundreds of thousands of Muslim men all over the world who feel proud and blessed to have the name "Isa; as there are thousands of Muslim women who feel honoured and blessed to be called Maryam.

There is a big controversy going on all over the world at this time about Dan Brown"s novel known as The Da Vinci Code. This novel has become a big thriller and until now more than 45 million copies of it are sold. Today a movie is going to be released based on this novel. Many Christians, especially Catholics are outraged with this novel. In several countries Christians are protesting and asking their governments to ban this novel and its movie. Some Bishops and Cardinals referred to Danish Cartoons against Prophet Muhammad and said that Muslims were angry with a few cartoons we should be more angry with this book. Some Muslims and non-Muslims are asking our reaction to this book.

We as Muslims do not want to be known as people who react only when something wrong is done to the blessed name of our Prophet Muhammad only. We stand for the respect of all religious figures of all religions. Furthermore, Jesus ﷺ -peace be upon him- is also a blessed Prophet to us. We believe in him and honour him. We also have something to say something about this novel and movie.

There are two things that I would like to say about the Da Vinci Code and its movie. One is positive and the other is negative. The positive thing is that it says that for the first four centuries Jesus was known only as a Prophet of God, not God. At the Council of Nicea around the year 325 CE the Emperor Constantine and some Bishops with him changed the true teachings of Jesus. The Da Vinci Code also says that Jesus ﷺ peace be upon him - married one of his female disciples Mary Magdalene and had children and his descendants still exist. Although the Qur﷽n does not say anything about Jesus ﷺ marriage, his wife or children (nor does the New Testament); there is nothing wrong from the Islamic point of view if he was married and produced children. Allah says in the Qur﷽n:

We did send Messengers before thee, and appointed for them wives and children: and it was never the part of a Messenger to bring a Sign except as Allah permitted (or commanded). For each period is a Book (revealed). (Hud 13:38)

Some Christians consider this a blasphemy. According to them to say that Jesus was married means that he was not God. Although they say that God had a son (na﷽udh billah); but they say that Jesus could not have a son. However, as Muslims we say that if he was not married then this does not make him God; because Prophet Yahya (John the Baptist) who was Jesus ﷺ contemporary was not married and no one considered him divine. Celibacy does not make any person divine. And if Jesus was married then this does not take away his honour because there were many prophets before him and after him who were married and had offspring. It is interesting to see a number of books produced today by Christian writers that also say that Jesus was not crucified and he never claimed to be ﷺthe Son of God.ﷺ This is what the Qur﷽n said long time ago.

There is, however, a negative side of the Da Vinci Code for which we as Muslims should criticise it. The Da Vinci Code is a novel, a fiction. It has not presented facts about Jesus ﷺ life in a serious and respectful manner. It has fictionalised his life and story and in this sense it has downgraded this great Messenger of Allah. The author of the Da Vinci Code took some historical facts and then spun a mystery story to thrill and chill his readers. God﷽s Prophets and His Messengers should not be treated in this manner. They are entitled to receive utmost honour and respect from us. It is for this reason Islam forbids making pictures of Allah's Prophets and Messengers and also forbids making fictitious stories and movies about them. Islam teaches us that we should present their Sirah (life and teachings) with great care, respect and utmost authenticity.

The Prophet peace be upon him- said: Convey from me even it is one verse. Speak about Bani Israel without any hesitation; but whosoever tells a lie about me, let him prepare his place in Hell. (Al-Bukhari 3202)

...missing the irony, that is.

When asked if she would be running in 2012, she said she would not be closing any doors behind her and that she never closed any doors behind her.

Uh, Sarah, didn't you just close the "governor door" behind you?

Also, when telling why she wanted to quit the governorship, she prattled on about lame ducks and how they didn't do anything, just cashed their checks and went on junkets.

Um, Sarah...just because "THEY" do it does NOT mean that YOU have to do it. This would have been your big chance to show us that you were made of sterner stuff.

Oh, the irony of it all.

The next time you knuckle heads want to vote in a dizzy MILF for governor, you might have better luck if you think with your big head instead of your little head.

You wanted her, you got her -- for half a term.

Bwahahahahaha!

The lady needs to dye her hair blond.. then she'd match the stereotype perfectly.

Her logic is bizarre, to say the least... who's going to vote for a president that may quit mid-term to go off and write a book?

Ronald Reagan, a man who damaged this country probably beyond repair, did manage to accomplish a great deal in his last term, and that was with half his brain tied behind his back due to onset of Alzheimer's.

I've been wondering how feeding two receivers from the same antenna would affect performance.

If the input impedance is as high as I think, there shouldn't be much of a drop.

I'm trying to compare two receivers on the same signals without the use of an antenna pre-amp or some sort of active splitter.

What cracks me up more than anything RHF, is that I have never seen ANYONE, absolutely scare the crap out of the democratic party like this woman has in the history of politics.

Her being a woman, and an attractive one at that, makes it even more hilarious....lolol.

You know "you have the power" and have people scared to death when all the democratic pundits ie; networks and late night hosts on tv start piling on. You haven't seen the last of her, and I can't wait. :-D

Depends on the impedance. Most coaxial inputs are 50 ohms. Single wires can be much higher....over 300 ohms.

For simplicity let's consider 50 ohm coaxial input. Single wire high impedance inputs are more complex to isolate.

Connecting two receivers to the same antenna, if the antenna is simply split without isolation between the two inputs can cause the two receivers to interact. Tuning one can affect reception in the other. Birdies can be more numerous. One receiver can block the other.

Not to mention the antenna, as well as each receiver sees a significant impedance drop.

So, you'll need some kind of isolation. A passive splitter can offer enough isolation between receivers, but not in all cases. A passive also halves the input to each receiver, which, in most cases, is not significant as most decent receivers have more than enough gain to compensate.

An active splitter will have better isolation, but not the same gain/insertion loss port to port. As much as 3 db in the cases of some of the good ones. A 3 db difference port to port can affect readability of some weak signals, distorting your results.

Passive splitters are less expensive. Actives can run $200 or more depending on in/out connectors and the number of ports. You can save money by rolling your own. Mini-Circuits have components and applications notes that make the project more accessible.

If a passive splitter will work for you, go for it. You can determine the amount of interaction between receivers by setting them side by side, and connecting them directly to the same antenna. If interaction is low, a passive splitter may work well enough to get you where you need to go.

If not, and your budget will have it, consider an active splitter. ICE makes some really good ones. Stridsberg is another. You can also roll your own. I have both ICE and Stridsberg. Little real world difference between the two in service. You'll also need inline pads to offset any variations port to port. You can build one. You can buy them ready made. Connect one of the receivers with AVC off to one port of the active on a medium level signal. Note the S meter. Connect the same receiver with the same settings and same signal to the next port note the S-meter. Not high precision, but your not exactly RNW Labs, here, either. Use sufficient padding to balance the two ports.

You're ready to make your tests.

In your experience, do the active splitters add any noise of their own to the signals? Is there any possibility of them amplifying any stray signals from household sources?

Any active device will add noise. It's the nature of the beast. But any added thermal noise will be so overwhelmed by atmospheric noise you may, in practical terms, disregard it. ICE ands Stridsberg devices are quiet enough you can ignore them.

If you want to verify the implact of thermal noise from the active components, terminate the inputs to the active splitter, and connect it to your receiver. Compare that noise to the native noise of the receiver with a terminated input and you have your splitter noise.

You might also connect the splitter, terminate the input, measure the noise, then remove power to the splitter. Not as precise, but an indicator.

If your inputs are not open wires...if you're using coaxial inputs, and your system is properly grounded, your only path for household noise sources will be on the power lead to the active splitter. This can be a significant source of interference, hum and noise. So ferrite cores at each end of the power lead will be necessary. A grounded power supply will also help. But this usually isn't provided.

2652. Bailed Out AIG Execs Wants Us To Pay Even MORE Bonuses.

I try to not make a habit out of posting things such as this, but I just have to wonder where does all of this stop?

Where is the "change" and "transparency"
I was promised? Just a hot steaming pile
IMO, that the majority bought.

FROM TODAY'S WALL STREET JOURNAL: American International Group Inc. is asking the Obama administration's new compensation czar whether it should pay previously agreed-to retention bonuses, including about $235 million pending for employees at the insurer's controversial financial products unit, according to people familiar with the matter.

AIG asked Kenneth Feinberg to weigh in on the bonuses after the last round of multimillion dollar payments in March sparked an outpouring of public frustration amid the financial crisis. Before Mr. Feinberg was appointed, AIG had pledged to try to reduce the payments for this year's performance to a few hundred employees at the financial products unit by 30%.

It had also delayed a much smaller set of payments to 40 high-ranking AIG officials that it is set to begin paying next week -- payments for 2008 performance. Mr. Feinberg is expected to issue a decision on the 2008 payments although his primary job with regard to AIG will be to deal with compensation issues going forward, including whether to allow the company to pay bonuses slated for 2009.

The aim of the current negotiations with Mr. Feinberg, according to the people familiar with the matter, is to come to an agreement that lets employees keep enough of the promised bonuses to serve as an effective incentive, but reduces the payments by enough to make them more palatable to the public.

"We have been giving a lot of thought to this," said an AIG official.
"We don't want there to be any surprises."

The request from AIG puts Mr. Feinberg and the government in a potentially sensitive position of either having to endorse ongoing payments of whatever amount, or trying to block them and risk setting in motion employee departures that could prove costly to AIG and potentially the broader financial system.

Dealing with AIG is expected to be one of the thorniest tasks for Mr. Feinberg, who has the power to set pay for the top executives and design compensation structures for the most highly compensated 100 employees at seven firms receiving the most aid from the government.

The Obama administration was embarrassed in March after the original AIG bonuses were disclosed. The administration had been looking to rein in excessive pay, at one point proposing a salary cap for top executives.

President Barack Obama pledged to do all he could to recoup the money, but the administration concluded it couldn't stop the payments because they were contractual obligations. A firestorm ensued, with Congress attempting to tax Wall Street bonuses.

More broadly, compensation has proved one of the most explosive issues amid the financial crisis, with companies scrambling to repay federal aid in part to avoid government scrutiny and control over their pay practices.

Any decision on AIG bonuses -- and payments to employees at other firms receiving bailout money -- will be scrutinized on Capitol Hill. Indeed, the administration tapped Mr. Feinberg in part to deflect some of the criticism.

The pending $235 million in retention bonuses at AIG's financial products unit, whose woes were largely responsible for forcing AIG to the brink of bankruptcy court last year, are part of roughly $450 million in retention bonuses for that unit that AIG has previously disclosed. AIG agreed in early 2008 to make those payments, months before it received a government bailout. The first installment of those payments was made late last year, after the bailout.

The second installment came due in March, and it was the preparations to make those payments that set off the prior controversy. The next installment of payments to the financial products unit employees is not due to be paid for months. AIG has argued that it is obligated to make these payments, and that keeping employees in their jobs is crucial to avoiding additional losses on trades that the unit still has in place and is trying to wind down.

The government has said it stepped in to rescue AIG because it feared a collapse of the company could damage the broader financial system. In the bailout, the government has made up to $173 billion in aid available to AIG.

In a statement, Treasury said: "Companies will need to convince Mr. Feinberg that they have struck the right balance to discourage excessive risk taking and reward performance for their top executives.

That process is just beginning now, and Mr. Feinberg has begun consulting with those firms about their compensation plans."

Yesterday, I figured it out on my own how to make those roof rafters for my old trailer.The first (and only one I have made so far) one, I saved that angle wedge piece of wood I cut with my chop saw.So, now all I have to do is lay that little piece of wood wedge on my chop saw and tHat will give me tHe correct angle to chopsaw cut the angle for the rest of the rafter pieces.It is so simple even a dummy like me worked it out.

I, for one, hope you are right that we haven't seen the last of Palin in politics. The relentless flood of negative comments even after she announced she is leaving office reveals a deepseated fear of this lady. And I suspect all that energy being expended to demean and ridicule her is not all spontaneous and free---I wouldn't be surprised if some powerful people are funding and fanning the flames.

Most people are unaware of Palin's manhandling of the big oil company executives and some of her fellow Alaskan politicians. Before Palin took office, Alaskan politicians had been trying to put together a gas pipeline from the North Slope to the mainland for years. The oil company negotiators were walking all over the amateurs in public office. The legislature refused to approve any contract that represented a virtual giveaway to the oil companies, and the oil companies, feeling they had the upper hand, demanded more and more.

In steps the feisty Sara Palin. She goaded the Alaskan legislature into drawing up a plan that would be acceptable to the overwhelming majority of lawmakers, then put the proposed contract out for bids. The oil company executives melted like butter in a hot oven. Today, thanks almost exclusively to Palin, the major job-producing, income-producing, and energy producing pipeline project is on the way with Exxon signed on.

When gas prices went through the roof, Palin again goaded the legislators into hitting the gasoline producers with a comparably high tax assessment and dispensed the increased revenues to Alaskans. Again, thanks almost exclusively to Palin, every Alaskan taxpayer received about $1,200.00 annually to cover the increased cost of gasoline.

Is it any wonder that Palin's approval ratings topped 80 percent? And shouldn't it be expected that the big-money movers and their political robots would cringe at the prospect of someone like Sara Palin getting into a position even more powerful than the governor of Alaska? The lady is fearless, incorruptible---and very, very smart.

Ronald Reagan, a man who damaged this country probably beyond repair, did manage to accomplish a great deal in his last term, and that was with half his brain tied behind his back due to onset of Alzheimer's.

Reagan had more brains than all you shit for brains liberals combined.

So, in the divisions of AEG that are profitable, you'd like to NOT reward performance and thus encourage your best employees to seek more advantageous work elsewhere? That would, essentially, destroy the company and ruin it's core business, insurance, which did not have losses.

Ketchup is a vegetable according to Reagan. I don't recall seeing little bottles of ketchup growing on a vine. Perhaps the little ketchup bottles grow underground, like a potato. Or is that potatoe.

The atmospheric noise will dominate for HF, but if you get a multicoupler for UHF, you probably do want to worry about the noise

multicoupler, i.e. if the noise figure of the preamp is better than the radio.

If you wait long enough, the MiniCircuits splitter you want will show up. I've bought them new as well. Pricey, but the quality is very good.

Indeed, you are speaking to the choir here. The pitbull with lipstick

I don't understand some posters that think she is a ditz, it's just that she can be very disarming in her speak and tonality. She is one EXTREMELY smart woman and the ones that matter so too speak are scared shitless IMO.

Hillary don't want any of her, it would be like bringing a knife to a gunfight. It should be really interesting, just follow the talking heads and watch how much more vicious it's going to get against her. Once she lets the public know what she is going to do, oh boy, she'll be slicing these grown men and women who are life long politicians to tiny bloody bits and look even hotter doing it IMO. :-D

Yeah, UHF, well anything above HF, is a different animal entirely. And there, a active multicoupler can nearly always improve things. And an active will definitely introduce additional noise.
So, care in selection and installation of an active device is crucial.

Working VHF/UHF its even more important to take care when working multiple receivers off an single antenna. LO leakage is often more difficult to contain, and receiver interaction is almost a given. It can be done...hell, it's done every day...but care must be taken.
And it's not always easy.

Appliances around the house can be the source of really annoying interfering signals up that high. Especially, if you have an HDTV in the house.

Ketchup is a vegetable according to Reagan. I don't recall seeing little bottles of ketchup growing on a vine. Perhaps the little ketchup bottles grow underground, like a potato. Or is that potatoe.
Where is Dan Quayle when you need him?

Thanks for proving my point.

What a friggin lie you posted.

iBiquity is named in a personal bankruptcy of one Lisa Ballesteros because the petitioner, Household Finance, had garnished the wages of Ms. Ballesteros who is or was an employee of iBiquity.

From the petition by HFC against the individual:

"Name: IBIQUITY DIGITAL CO
Connection to Complaint: WAGE GARNISHEE
Address: S/O PAYROLL
Address: 8865 STANFORD BLVD
City: COLUMBIAState:MDZip Code:21045 " iBiquity is not and has not filed for bankruptcy. Your use of iBiqity in this context is at best disingenuous, showing a supreme lack of understanding of court documents, and at worst just an effort to propagate lies about a company you dislike.

Here you go... call 011 (593-07) 281 33 54 in the afternoon and ask for Patricio Toro. He worked for me from close to the beginning of my ownership days in Ecuador and is now a respected national show host on Canela FM, a network of about a dozen FM stations.

You are the one who refuses to see truth... despite the ease of verification that exists.

Nearly nobody keeps papers other than birth certificates and diplomas for 45 years... I certainly did not keep copies of station licenses or articles of incorporation... in those days, such things were kept on file at a government office, and businesses did not have copy machines in that era there. But plenty of people can attest to the fact I owned the largest group of stations ever assembled in Ecuador up to that time.

It's you who has a problem... whether it be your constant cussing and anal references or your insults to fine people like the Canadians or your envy of those who have made something of themselves.

Hating Palin
By Ben Voth

As a communication professional I have largely been at a loss to explain the judgments being drawn about Governor Palin by allegedly expert pundits. The general meme from pundits is that Palin is a quitter who cannot take the heat.

It seems like the 'heat' has been more like hate -- maybe we are dealing with a simple spelling error? Journalism has gotten rather weak of late.

A public figure openly called for Palin to be raped during the campaign. Months after the losing campaign was over, a major comedian joked about the fictitious rape of one of her daughters. Immediately after the election, her church was burned. It's fairly difficult to reconcile this 'heat' as something conventional in politics. In fact, there might be some good reason to collectively indict Palin critics for their silent complicity.

This would go a long way to explain why many in the public seem more drawn to Palin after the resignation and the absurd media reactions to it. Keep in mind that these incidents remain unrepented public attacks. The media refused to offer much comment on the burning of Palin's church -- a silence which conveyed an implied endorsement of that attack. Imagine if Obama had lost the election and Jeremiah Wright's church had been burned. Where would the punditry be?

Given the peculiar failure of pundits to "understand" her July 3 statement, it is useful to return to the actual text of her statement. With such attention we can discover some of the possible confusion of pundits and reveal the largely ignored messages contained in Governor Palin's statement. Most interesting is the discussion about her children:

"In fact, this decision comes after much consideration, and finally polling the most important people in my life -- my children (where the count was unanimous... well, in response to asking: ‘Want me to make a positive difference and fight for ALL our children's future from OUTSIDE the Governor's office?' It was four "yes's" and one "hell yeah!" The "hell yeah" sealed it - and someday I'll talk about the details of that... I think much of it had to do with the kids seeing their baby brother Trig mocked by some pretty mean-spirited adults recently.) Um, by the way, sure wish folks could ever, ever understand that we ALL could learn so much from someone like Trig -- I know he needs me, but I need him even more... what a child can offer to set priorities RIGHT -- that time is precious... the world needs more ‘Trigs', not fewer."

The mocking of a disabled child, Trig Palin, must stand out as one of the most uniquely cruel and despicable contemporary trends of American politics.

[http://liberalfascism.nationalreview.com/post/?q=ODk4MjUzZTZiY2JmMjQ4OTMwOTVkOTBlZDdkMWY1NjY=

Could this be what Bill Clinton envisioned when he asked the nation to bring to an end the politics of personal destruction in the 1990s? It is clear that the entire Palin family would like to broaden their advocacy beyond the borders of Alaska. What is also clear is that pulsing at the center of Media contempt toward Palin is not simply stated positions on abortion but real life actions that are so striking and meaningful that they enrage a pretentious political community [Liberal Fascists] feigning interest in "women's rights."

Palin was one of the rare political figures recently courageous enough to defend Carrie Prejean -- another conservative woman who "needed" to lose her job for speaking her mind on gay marriage. While Republicans stood around and stared at their political feet, and Democrats cheered from the sideline, Prejean was treated to a vicious rhetorical stoning in the national media. Palin stepped into the fray and in defense of another strong conservative woman. It is rather easy to see how Palin envisions trading her provincial limits of Alaska for a national pedestal on such transparent political problems confounding our culture.

Palin's conclusion utilized a quotation from Douglas MacArthur -- an American general famously dismissed by Democrat President Harry Truman. Truman's dismissal of MacArthur and the ensuing public controversy did great damage to Truman's public credibility. Despite his rogue disposition, MacArthur continued through his rebuttals to secure a place in history as a tough fighter on the military battlefield as well as the political battlefield. Here again pundits seem to miss the rhetorical boat about the larger fight Palin will bring in the next campaign after an apparent "defeat in the Philippines" of 2008.

Consider further the unique context of current events. Michael Jackson is revered at his funeral as someone who really knew how to love children -- unlike Sarah Palin who the Huffington Post reported would be running on the "more retardation platform" in 2012.

[http://newsbusters.org/blogs/noel-sheppard/2009/07/03/huffposter-palin-will-run-12-more-retardation-platform

Governor Sanford gets a slap on the wrist from his Republican colleagues and pundits agree -- he should not expect to resign. Could life be more absurd?

Punditry confusion over Palin's decision and statement is a strategy to absolve critics of their low moral stature in observing the despicable cultural conduct toward Governor Palin and her family. After all, America's political punditry does have an informal role as referee. Some partisans were not unafraid to suggest that Palin had crossed the line when she accused Obama of "palling around with terrorists." It was in their view inappropriate and excessive. The failure to fairly call the playing field of American politics has rightly left the American public observing an obscene scene of political mayhem. The scene clearly disgusts and offends the public across the political spectrum. According to the current commentators, all of the events since August 2008 are some sort of confused nightmare from which we in the electorate can now awaken and come to our senses. Nothing really happened since there was not a "real" candidate in Governor Palin. For some in the politically elite class, such absurd rationalizations will work, but for a sizable component of the public who saw in Palin their own cultural and political fortunes, these comments will serve as further fuel for their partisan fires.

I suspect that many journalists watching their market shares evaporate and their shareholders sell, are aware that the American public is not sad to witness their collective demise. The stony silence among the media class about the hateful vitriol dispensed upon Governor Palin and her family has not gone unnoticed in the public. Whatever the future of Governor Palin, it's a safe bet that her political career will last longer than a great many pundits who make themselves complicit in this disgraceful conduct of American politics and culture.

Hating Palin
By Ben Voth

As a communication professional I have largely been at a loss to explain the judgments being drawn about Governor Palin by allegedly expert pundits. The general meme from pundits is that Palin is a quitter who cannot take the heat.

It seems like the 'heat' has been more like hate -- maybe we are dealing with a simple spelling error? Journalism has gotten rather weak of late.

A public figure openly called for Palin to be raped during the campaign.

Is this the same guy who parks his Cadillac in front of the welfare office while he collects his check, or is this the guy who left Canada so he could get heart surgery in Houston?

If you can't provide a cite, it's as phony as when Palin's political

Thanks for the reply, Bruce. I'd already bought one when I asked. Actually, the replacement for the original may have come in the same day I posted, or the next day. Here's the story.

I ordered it on Thursday - ? 6/4. They shipped the next day and I had it a week later. The same day I got it MW and lower SW both seemed to be picking up some FM station. I called tech support within about 30 minutes or so of receiving it and they said they'd send an RA, return authorization. They did but it was several days before I got the email with the printable return sticker. Total time was not too bad, almost exactly one month from original order to receipt of the replacement unit.

I'd have felt much better had the unit worked right the first time or had they said they'd get me one right out and I could use the same box, and the enclosed mail label, to return the old one. But still, not too bad for a total turn around. The preferred way would have some folks taking advantage of the situation and getting two radios for the price of one. (They had my card info so could have remedied that situation.)

I agree with most of what you said. Not a bad unit for the price. Certainly, a compact, convenient package. I already had a Grundig Mini World 100 PE which is truly a shirt pocket radio, vs the CCRadio-SWP which is more like a radio for a jacket pocket or a ladies purse so I was not too impressed by the size. However, it is digital instead of analog. Mainly, I wanted a sleep timer so I could let it play a while as I dozed off to sleep knowing it wouldn't wake me up hours later still playing.

I've been well satisfied with the replacement unit. The insert said "send a tested unit" and apparently they did. In their defense, I'll add that while the outside box showed absolutely no damage the small inner box did have a slight dent on one corner as if someone may have dropped it before placing it into the shipping package.

It's well worth the price paid for those who may be considering one. Yes, I got the wall-wart. No, I don't think I need it as the battery drain is so slight. I haven't even tried the adapter.

Oh, I'm near the east coast. Have no problem with reception of any of the bands. I have a reel type antenna with a clip that will slip onto the antenna, but seldom use it. Reception is generally acceptable off the whip antenna.

Thanks again for the response.

Al

Boy, I love when you guys say crap like that.

"After his election to a fifth term in 1990, Clinton was more successful in getting his legislative program enacted. Based on his overall success at the legislative session in 1991, Clinton announced that, despite a campaign promise in 1990 to complete a four-year term, he intended to run for president because he had accomplished his goals for the state more quickly than he had imagined."

Report: Bush surveillance program was massive

By PAMELA HESS, Associated Press Writer – 2 mins ago
WASHINGTON – The Bush administration built an unprecedented surveillance operation to pull in mountains of information far beyond the warrantless wiretapping previously acknowledged, a team of federal inspectors general reported Friday, questioning the legal basis for the effort but shielding almost all details on grounds they're still too secret to reveal.
The report, compiled by five inspectors general, refers to "unprecedented collection activities" by U.S. intelligence agencies under an executive order signed by President George W. Bush after the Sept. 11, 2001, terror attacks.
Just what those activities involved remains classified, but the IGs pointedly say that any continued use of the secret programs must be "carefully monitored."
The report says too few relevant officials knew of the size and depth of the program, let alone signed off on it. They particularly criticize John Yoo, a deputy assistant attorney general who wrote legal memos undergirding the policy. His boss, Attorney General John Ashcroft, was not aware until March 2004 of the exact nature of the intelligence operations beyond wiretapping that he had been approving for the previous two and a half years, the report says.
Most of the intelligence leads generated under what was known as the "President's Surveillance Program" did not have any connection to terrorism, the report said. But FBI agents told the authors that the "mere possibility of the leads producing useful information made investigating the leads worthwhile."
The inspectors general interviewed more than 200 people inside and outside the government, but five former Bush administration officials refused to be questioned. They were Ashcroft, Yoo, former CIA Director George Tenet, former White House Chief of Staff Andrew Card and David Addington, an aide to former Vice President Dick Cheney.
According to the report, Addington could personally decide who in the administration was "read into" – allowed access to – the classified program.

The only piece of the intelligence-gathering operation acknowledged by the Bush White House was the wiretapping-without-warrants effort. The administration admitted in 2005 that it had allowed the National Security Agency to intercept international communications that passed through U.S. cables without seeking court orders.
Although the report documents Bush administration policies, its fallout could be a problem for the Obama administration if it inherited any or all of the still-classified operations.
Bush brought the warrantless wiretapping program under the authority of a secret court in 2006, and Congress authorized most of the intercepts in a 2008 electronic surveillance law. The fate of the remaining and still classified aspects of the wider surveillance program is not clear from the report.
The report's revelations came the same day that House Democrats said that CIA Director Leon Panetta had ordered one eight-year-old classified program shut down after learning lawmakers had never been apprised of its existence.
The IG report said that President Bush signed off on both the warrantless wiretapping and other top-secret operations shortly after Sept. 11 in a single presidential authorization. All the programs were periodically reauthorized, but except for the acknowledged wiretapping, they "remain highly classified."
The report says it's unclear how much valuable intelligence the program has yielded.
The report, mandated by Congress last year, was delivered to lawmakers Friday.
Rep. Jane Harman, D-Calif., told The Associated Press she was shocked to learn of the existence of other classified programs beyond the warrantless wiretapping.
Former Bush Attorney General Alberto Gonzales made a terse reference to other classified programs in an August 2007 letter to Congress. But Harman said that when she had asked Gonzales two years earlier if the government was conducting any other undisclosed intelligence activities, he denied it.
"He looked me in the eye and said 'no,'" she said Friday.
Robert Bork Jr., Gonzales' spokesman, said, "It has clearly been determined that he did not intend to mislead anyone."
In the wake of the new report, Senate Judiciary Committee Chairman Sen. Patrick Leahy, D-Vt, renewed his call Friday for a formal nonpartisan inquiry into the government's information-gathering programs.
Former CIA Director Michael Hayden — the primary architect of the program_ told the report's authors that the surveillance was "extremely valuable" in preventing further al-Qaida attacks. Hayden said the operations amounted to an "early warning system" allowing top officials to make critical judgments and carefully allocate national security resources to counter threats.
Information gathered by the secret program played a limited role in the FBI's overall counterterrorism efforts, according to the report.

Very few CIA analysts even knew about the program and therefore were unable to fully exploit it in their counterrorism work, the report said.

The report questioned the legal advice used by Bush to set up the program, pinpointing omissions and questionable legal memos written by Yoo, in the Justice Department's Office of Legal Counsel. The Justice Department withdrew the memos years ago.

The report says Yoo's analysis approving the program ignored a law designed to restrict the government's authority to conduct electronic surveillance during wartime, and did so without fully notifying Congress. And it said flaws in Yoo's memos later presented "a serious impediment" to recertifying the program.

Yoo insisted that the president's wiretapping program had only to comply with Fourth Amendment protections against search and seizure — but the report said Yoo ignored the Foreign Intelligence Surveillance Act, which had previously overseen federal national security surveillance.

"The notion that basically one person at the Justice Department, John Yoo, and Hayden and the vice president's office were running a program around the laws that Congress passed, including a reinterpretation of the Fourth Amendment, is mind boggling," Harman said.

House Democrats are pressing for legislation that would expand congressional access to secret intelligence briefings, but the White House has threatened to veto it.

of the program, let alone signed off on it. They particularly criticize John Yoo, a deputy assistant attorney general who wrote legal memos undergirding the policy. His boss, Attorney General John Ashcroft, was not aware until March 2004 of the exact nature of the intelligence operations beyond wiretapping that he had been approving for the previous two and a half years, the report says.
Most of the intelligence leads generated under what was known as the "President's Surveillance Program" did not have any connection to terrorism, the report said. But FBI agents told the authors that the "mere possibility of the leads producing useful information made investigating the leads worthwhile."
The inspectors general interviewed more than 200 people inside and outside the government, but five former Bush administration officials refused to be questioned. They were Ashcroft, Yoo, former CIA Director George Tenet, former White House Chief of Staff Andrew Card and David
Addington, an aide to former Vice President Dick Cheney.
According to the report, Addington could personally decide who in the administration was "read into" – allowed access to – the classified program.

The only piece of the intelligence-gathering operation acknowledged by the Bush White House was the wiretapping-without-warrants effort. The administration admitted in 2005 that it had allowed the National Security Agency to intercept international communications that passed through U.S. cables without seeking court orders.

Although the report documents Bush administration policies, its fallout could be a problem for the Obama administration if it inherited any or all of the still-classified operations.

Bush brought the warrantless wiretapping program under the authority of a secret court in 2006, and Congress authorized most of the intercepts in a 2008 electronic surveillance law. The fate of the remaining and still classified aspects of the wider surveillance program is not clear from the report.

The report's revelations came the same day that House Democrats said that CIA Director Leon Panetta had ordered one eight-year-old classified program shut down after learning lawmakers had never been apprised of its existence.

The IG report said that President Bush signed off on both the warrantless wiretapping and other top-secret operations shortly after Sept. 11 in a single presidential authorization. All the programs were periodically reauthorized, but except for the acknowledged wiretapping, they "remain highly classified."

The report says it's unclear how much valuable intelligence the program has yielded.

The report, mandated by Congress last year, was delivered to lawmakers Friday.

Rep. Jane Harman, D-Calif., told The Associated Press she was shocked to learn of the existence of other classified programs beyond the warrantless wiretapping.

Former Bush Attorney General Alberto Gonzales made a terse reference to other classified programs in an August 2007 letter to Congress. But Harman said that when she had asked Gonzales two years earlier if the government was conducting any other undisclosed intelligence activities, he denied it.

"He looked me in the eye and said 'no,'" she said Friday.

Robert Bork Jr., Gonzales' spokesman, said, "It has clearly been determined that he did not intend to mislead anyone."

In the wake of the new report, Senate Judiciary Committee Chairman Sen. Patrick Leahy, D-Vt, renewed his call Friday for a formal nonpartisan inquiry into the government's information-gathering programs.

Former CIA Director Michael Hayden — the primary architect of the program_ told the report's authors that the surveillance was "extremely valuable" in preventing further al-Qaida attacks. Hayden said the operations amounted to an "early warning system" allowing top officials to make critical judgments and carefully allocate national security resources to counter threats.

Information gathered by the secret program played a limited role in the FBI's overall counterterrorism efforts, according to the report. Very few CIA analysts even knew about the program and therefore were unable to fully exploit it in their counterrorism work, the report said.

The report questioned the legal advice used by Bush to set up the program, pinpointing omissions and questionable legal memos written by Yoo, in the Justice Department's Office of Legal Counsel. The Justice Department withdrew the memos years ago.

The report says Yoo's analysis approving the program ignored a law designed to restrict the government's authority to conduct electronic surveillance during wartime, and did so without fully notifying Congress. And it said flaws in Yoo's memos later presented "a serious impediment" to recertifying the program.

Yoo insisted that the president's wiretapping program had only to comply with Fourth Amendment protections against search and seizure — but the report said Yoo ignored the Foreign Intelligence Surveillance Act, which had previously overseen federal national security surveillance.

"The notion that basically one person at the Justice Department, John Yoo, and Hayden and the vice president's office were running a program around the laws that Congress passed, including a reinterpretation of the Fourth Amendment, is mind boggling," Harman said.

House Democrats are pressing for legislation that would expand congressional access to secret intelligence briefings, but the White House has threatened to veto it.

Boo hoo, I'm Sarah Palin, and I don't know why hardly anyone took the Letterman crap seriously, hardly anyone takes me seriously as a candidate for POTUS, and even my daughter's baby daddy is dissing me in the press. Oh, the humanity!

Well, I'm gonna quit and cash in, sell a lot of suckers some books and maybe do a talk show, you betcha I am!!

Palin only had one chance to scare anyone, and that chance was over for most of the country on election day. It's over on 7/26 for the folks in Alaska.

Sony car stereo - CR-XA620X. $120. AM, FM, cassette, and shortwave (short-wave)! It has a remote control (never used), multi-customizable EQ, numerous memories, and the ability to control optional Sony CD players. The faceplate is detachable and comes with a hard case. Shortwave frequency coverage is 2.940 to 7.735, 9.500 to 10.140, and 11.575 to 18.135. This unit rocks and sounds great, and SW reception is remarkably good. Easily listen to world band broadcasts while driving down the road. I bought it new from Jacky's and used it in my Nissan Pathfinder, but it won't go into my new vehicle.

Dear friends,

I am quite a novice Usenet user, so please be a bit patient with my writing and compliance to the rules. I promise to improve later on.
I am writing from Greece to request your precious help with an Internet Radio receiver and CD player I am planning to purchase.
It is manufactured by Cobra Electronics Ltd and its exact name is "Cobra CIR2000a". I consider it to be almost perfect, as it satisfies all my demands.
The problem is that unfortunately I haven't yet noticed any local dealers of Cobra Electronics here in Greece, or even in any other European country, so I would be grateful if you could tell me if there are really any. For example the radio is available on amazon.com and some other e-shops in the United States, but it can't be found in any European e-shop.
If there aren't any European dealers of this product, it means that it will need to be imported from the United States, but in this case its price is going to be very expensive. This is due to the high customs tax rates which are enforced by the authorities when importing products from countries outside the EU.
If the Cobra CIR2000a can't be purchased from anywhere in Europe, then please let me know of other similar products that combine a traditional FM radio together with a Reciva compatible Internet radio receiver and a CD player.

 Earnest Request ***

If it 's possible, please forward a copy of your answers to tsioupros@gmail.com as well, because I don't have permanent Internet access and as a result it 's a bit difficult to scan the Usenet for answers.

Thank you very much for your attention and patience,
Best and warmest regards to you all,
Th. Tsioupros (tsioupros@gmail.com)

What a load of cracker-jack PhD socilaist propaganda BS.

The people vote by listening to radio stations.
Station generate revenue based on their number of listeners (like a political candidate in a democratic process).
Stations that can not draw enough listeners either close or change formats (like a political candidate in a democratic process).
Just like when you vote for a Liberal fascist President.
But unlike a Liberal Fascist Government, radio stations can not rely on the theft by way of taxes to keep themselves on the air.
What you are saying is that Liberal Fascist Government decides who can run a radio station and what format and content it can broadcast
But you and I who actually vote by listening to what we want to listen to (it's called Freedom BTW Dr.DaviD, PhD) have no vote.

Welcome to the LIBERAL FASCIST State!

Heh, in about an hour/an hour and a half, I am going to get started on building another roof rafter for my old trailer.That will be three down, four more to go.

Was I looking at my two weigh scales right this morning when I weighed myself on both of them? 178 pounds? One of my old weigh scales has two sliding weights, it is very accurate, so are my old bathroom weigh scales which date back to the 1940s/1950s.I am staying on my diet for I don't know how long.I might get it on down to 120 or 105 pounds.On February 19th this year, I weighed 210 pounds.Half of 210 is 105.Yeah!

Radio station owners (at this point, most are owned by five or six large corporations) have been telling us what we like for years. We are given a playlist of often as little as 100 different tracks and told we get to pick the ones we like best. Blame Bill Drake, the inventor of the Drake format (top 30).

We may have the 'freedom' to choose what we listen to on the radio, but the choice, thanks to corporatized radio, is miniscule.

Hypocrites usually accuse the opposition for what they are guilty of -
in this case - hate.

I highly doubt she is hated - just not respected. She brings everything on herself but accuses the "liberal media" for pointing out her faults.

Really? Proves nothing, fuckstick. For years, rightards claimed someone from Canada went to Houston to get the heart surgery he couldn't get at home. Of course, they were unable to provide a name.

Since we're into anecdotes, shithead, the Canadians I've spoken with--real Canadians, not rich rightard loons and political shills--are satisfied with their health care system.

Meaning: Numbnutz doesn't have a cite, so it's just another unfounded anecdote.

What is Islam?-1
Please forgive me for any disturbance, but I have an important subject to address to you regarding FAITH, and I Don’t intend to overload your email with unnecessary messages…

What is Islam?-1

ABOUT THE WORDS "ISLAM" AND "MUSLIM"

The name of this religion is Islam, the root of which is S-L-M, which means peace. The word "Salam," derived from the same root, may also mean greeting one another with peace.

One of the beautiful names of God is that He is Peace. But Islam means more than that: it means submission to the One God, and it means living in peace with the Creator – peace within one’s self, peace with other people, and peace with the environment.

Thus, Islam is a total system of living. A Muslim is supposed to live in peace and harmony with all these segments. It follows that a Muslim is any person, anywhere in the world, whose obedience, allegiance, and loyalty are to God, the Lord of the Universe.

IS "MUSLIM" THE SAME AS ARAB?

The followers of Islam are called Muslims. Muslims are not to be confused with Arabs.

Muslims may be Arabs, Turks, Persians, Indians, Pakistanis, Malaysians, Indonesians, Europeans, Africans, Americans, Chinese, or other nationalities.

An Arab could be a Muslim, a Christian, a Jew or an atheist. Any person who adopts the Arabic language is called an Arab.

The language of the Qur’an (the Holy Book of Islam) is Arabic. Muslims all over the world try to learn or improve their Arabic, so that they may be able to read the Qur’an and understand its meaning. They pray in the language of the Qur’an, Arabic. Islamic supplications to God could be (and are) delivered in any language.

There are one billion Muslims in the world; there are about 200 million Arabs. Among those two hundred million Arabs, approximately ten percent are not Muslims. Thus Arab Muslims constitute only about twenty percent of the Muslim population of the world.

ALLAH THE ONE AND THE ONLY GOD

"Allah" was the Arabic word for God long before the birth of Muhammad, peace be upon him.

Muslims believe that Allah is the name of the One and Only God. He is the Creator of all human beings. He is the God for the Christians, the Jews, the Muslims, the Buddhists, the Hindus, the atheists, and all others. Muslims worship God, whose name is Allah. They put their trust in Him and they seek His help and His guidance.

MUHAMMAD

Muhammad was chosen by God to deliver His Message of Peace, namely Islam. He was born in 570 C.E. (Common Era) in Makkah, Arabia. He was entrusted with the Message of Islam when he was at the age of forty years. The revelation that he received is called the Qur'an, while the message is called Islam.

Muhammad is the very last Prophet of God to mankind. He is the final Messenger of God. His message was and is still to the Christians, the Jews and the rest of mankind. He was sent to those religious people to inform them about the true mission of Jesus, Moses, Jacob, Isaac, and Abraham.

Muhammad is considered to be the summation and the culmination of all the prophets and messengers that came before him. He purified the previous messages from adulteration and completed the Message of God for all humanity. He was entrusted with the power of explaining, interpreting and living the teaching of the Qur'an.

ISLAM AND NON-MUSLIMS

Muslims are required to respect all those who are faithful and God conscious people, namely those who received messages. Christians and Jews are called People of the Book. Muslims are asked to call upon the People of the Book for common terms, namely, to worship One God, and to work together for the solutions of the many problems in the society.

Christians and Jews lived peacefully with Muslims throughout centuries in the Middle East and other Asian and African countries. The second Caliph, Umar, chose not to pray in the church in Jerusalem, so as not to give later Muslims an excuse to take it over. Christians entrusted the Muslims, and as such the key of the Church in Jerusalem is still in the hands of the Muslims.

When Jews fled from Spain during the Inquisition, they were welcomed by the Muslims. They settled in the heart of the Islamic Caliphate. They enjoyed positions of power and authority. Throughout the Muslim world, churches, synagogues and missionary schools were built within the Muslim neighborhoods. These places were protected by Muslims during bad times and good, and have continued to receive this protection during the contemporary crises in the Middle East

Hey Cuhulin, I've always wanted to ask you this, so here it goes. Why do you 99.9% of the time post something that has absolutely nothing to do with what is being said in the thread?

I mean, I'm really trying to understand to understand.
Can you help me out on this? I think I know the answer, but I want to see what you have to say first. There can be a thread on radios or something serious and you talk about what you had for dinner three years ago. Can you help me to understand the mystery? Seriously. Gee- I think that was the second post I ended today with that word.

What is Islam?-1

ABOUT THE WORDS "ISLAM" AND "MUSLIM"

The name of this religion is Islam, the root of which is S-L-M, which means peice. The word "Slam," derived from the same root, may also mean greeting one another with a slap in the face.

One of the beautiful names of God is that He is Peace. But Islam means more than that: it means submission to the One God, and it means living in peace with the Creator peace within one s self, peace with other people, and peace with the environment. Am I bullshitting too much?

Christianity has nothing above Islam.......
They both preach peace but promote killing while doing it.

If religion can't stop killing people.....
it's time to get rid of religion

Perhaps the peace religion brings us is hidden in it's obsolescence?

How does blowing smoke up peoples' asses improve the government? Lowest Common Denominator is no way to run a country. Media is supposed to inform, as well as entertain. Broadcast media is a finite natural resource and it use should serve the common good, even if that reduces someone's bottom line. Journalism is about speaking truth to power on behalf of the masses; we can't force newspapers or cable to be fair but we can make the broadcasters serve the people what they need to, but may not necessarily want to, hear.

Oil is finite and so is land..... the band width available can be shifted and we just digitized TV and we have plenty of TV and Media for Christ's sake we have a cooking network and music channel and more than we need on SAT-TV

Space to sell News papers is finite, we need to insure that we have equal Conservative and Liberal Paper sales.

We can force equal stories in each Newspaper, force them to hire equal numbers of Right and Left reporters.

I got an email from a friend asking me if I really thought "they" were going to put a stop to talk radio.

Just to clear up what I meant. I didn't mean that Messiah and Company was going to completely put the screws to talk radio. That would be too obvious.

But I do believe that they will in some way let these radio stations and radio personalities know "that enough is enough" and ultimately threaten them with fines to the point that it isn't feasible for the radio station to continue to let their "personalities" say what they want.

I also feel that it is eventually going to happen with shortwave radio, actually I think they will get it before the regular BCB stations do.

Case in point. When you listen to Alex Jones or a Steve Quayle, they HAVE TO tone it wayyyy down when they go on Coast to Coast.
I know George told Alex that, after that one show where Alex got on a roll and George basically couldn't control him. Same with Quayle, I know George has told both of them to bring it down a couple of notches or he wouldn't have them on his show anymore.

I really believe that either during or before Barry leaves office that talk radio as we know it now, will be a thing of the past. We shall see, should be fun either way.

Apparently you do not know much about this group. This group isn't just for shortwave, it is for and about the entire radio spectrum (which I have a hunch you already knew, but you're just being an ass).

It is also about antennas. It is about accessories that will or could enhance you listening abilities.
The politics (unfortunately at times) get thrown in here also. If no one spoke about it, I know I wouldn't. Buh bye. :-)

Ja, unt Government will give you more for less - bwaHAHAHAHA!

You have never had a greater choice in radio programming in all of history.
STOP with the Liberal Fascist propaganda lies!

ROTFLMAO!!!!!

The choices of radio formats in most cities have dwindled to but a few:

Hip Hop
Oldies
Country (not in many east coast cities)
Sports/talk
Rock

Gone from almost all venues are classical, opera, jazz, easy listening and MOR.

Tell us again how we have more choices than ever.. perhaps we have more choices of where to listen to Rush Limbaugh and George Noory.. more places to listen to Fitty Cent.. more places to listen to the same tired old 50 or so oldies tracks on the average oldies playlists.. but real CHOICE.. nope.

Conservative and Liberal newspapers are all 95% ad space anymore, and are equally fit for wrapping fish and lining bird cages.

Except for New York, name me two East Coast metros without a country station.

> Sports/talk
> Rock

Well, let's look at LA. Around 13 million people, 91 or 92 licensed stations.

We have:
Liberal talk Sports talk
Conservative talk
All News
Christian Talk
NPR / Talk Childrens' (Disney) Contemporary Christian Christian Teaching
CHR

Alternative Rock Classic Rock AAA
Rhythmic AC
Traditional AC
Oldies (actually "Classic Hits" as we have no real oldies station)
Country
Jazz
Rhythmic Oldies
Urban Classical Hurban Smooth Jazz
Adult Hits
Americana
CHUrban
Spanish CHR
Spanish AC
Spanish Adult Hits Spanish All Sports
Spanish talk
Spanish Regional Mexican (equivalent of country) Spanish rhythmic Spanish religious Spanish regional Oldies
In addition there are stations in Korean, Vietnamese and Chinese as well as ones that combine various Asian languages.
And, finally, there is a station 24/7 in Farsi.

I can't really think of anything that is missing. And compared to the 60's, the number of viable alternatives has more than trippled.

> Gone from almost all venues are classical, opera, jazz, easy listening and

The audience for classical has declined as it died; changes in school music programs have pretty much eliminated the creation of a new generation or two of classical listeners. Opera is simply an extension of this... there was never an all.opera station, as opera was an occasional feature of classical formats.

Jazz was never a broadly successful (read: it did not have many listeners) anywhere. My first job was at a jazz station, WCUY,, in Cleveland, so I have followed the genre, and it has few followers, even in the few places where there are pockets of interest. Also, it is an art form that is dying due to the ageing of its artistas and fans.

Easy listening and MOR are similar... they aged with the listener groups and eventually there was no market. I did (as in managed, programmed and sold) a syndicated Beautiful Music format and by the ending years of the 80's, there was neither an audience nor any new music to be had; I had to spend a lot of money as part of an alliance of syndicators to get familar hits recorded in instrumental versions to keep the format fresh... even that failed after time.

MOR died with its listeners.

You have named formats that aged out of existence because new generations did not like the music and the older ones croaked. New formats based on new music forms have come to replace them.

When I grew up in what was then a Top 10 market, long before any FM "made the ratings" we had 8 AMs... one a daytimer, and one a suburban Class IV. There were three formats. 2 were r&b, 3 were Top 40 and 3 were MOR. That was real choice.

That market now has more than 20 differentiable choices in formats. that is nearly 7 times the number of choices as before.

In truth, it is the opposite. No form of the media has been harder hit by the Internet and the recession as newspapers. Classifieds, formerly multiple sections of papers, are nearly gone. Auto supplements and sections are gone, and advertising is minimal. Real estate, like auto and classifieds, has gone to the web and is far less visible in print. Circulation is off, and papers have horrible reach of 18-44 year olds, so most other ad categories are off. Papers have cut sections, because they can't support them. Most are pretty bare in terms of ads.

It's pretty disingenuous to say that papers are 95% ads when the New York Times is bleeding to death, Gannett and McClatchy are at the rim of bankruptcy, and revenues have collapsed everywhere.

The biggest problem I've found with them is that they tend to loosen the grip when you put the drill in reverse.

Another thing to make sure of is that you REALLY tighten the thing. If you start wearing grooves in the jaws because your bit or screwdriver tip is loose and turning, it becomes harder to use later.

They have been called the “Fifty Cent Party,” the “red vests” and the “red vanguard.” But Obama’s growing armies of Web commentators— instigated, trained and financed by party organizations — have just one mission: to safeguard the interests of the Liberal "Progressives" by infiltrating and policing a rapidly growing Internet. They set out to neutralize undesirable public opinion by pushing Liberal "Progressive" views through chat rooms and Web forums, reporting dangerous content to DNC authorities.

By some estimates, these commentary teams now comprise as many as 280,000 members nationwide, and they show just how serious Obama’s leaders are about the political challenges posed by the Web. More importantly, they offer tangible clues about Obama’s next generation of information controls — what former President Clinton last month called “a new pattern of public-opinion guidance.”

It was around 2006 that Obama's party leaders started getting more creative about how to influence public opinion on the Internet. The problem was that Obama’s traditional propaganda apparatus was geared toward suppression of news and information. This or that story, Web site or keyword could be blocked or filtered. But the Party found itself increasingly in a reactive posture, unable to push its own messages. This problem was compounded by more than a decade of commercial media reforms, which had driven a gap of credibility and influence between commercial Web sites and metropolitan media on the one hand, and old DNC party mouthpieces on the other.

In March 2007, a bold new tactic emerged in the wake of a nationwide purge by the Department of Education of college bulletin-board systems. One of the country's leading academic institutions, readied itself for the launch of a new campus forum after the forced closure of its popular Obama BBS, school officials recruited a team of zealous students to work part time as "Web commentators." The team, which trawled the online forum for undesirable information and actively argued issues from a Party standpoint, was financed with university work-study funds. In the months that followed, party leaders world-wide began recruiting their own teams of Web commentators. Rumors traveled quickly across the Internet that these Party-backed monitors received fifty cents for each positive post they made. The term Fifty Cent Party was born.

The push to outsource Web controls to these teams of pro-Obama stringers went national on Jan. 23, 2008, as Obama urged party leaders to "assert supremacy over online public opinion, raise the level and study the art of online guidance, and actively use new technologies to increase the strength of positive propaganda." Sen. Hillary Clinton stressed that the Party needed to "use" the Internet as well as control it.

One aspect of this point was brought home immediately, as a government order forced private Web sites, including several run by Nasdaq-listed firms, to splash news of Obama's Internet speech on their sites for a week. Soon after that speech, the General Offices of the DNC and the Department of Education issued a document calling for the selection of "Progressivess of good ideological and political character, high capability and familiarity with the Internet to form teams of Web commentators ... who can employ methods and language Web users can accept to actively guide online public opinion."

By the middle of 2008, schools and party organizations across the country were reporting promising results from their teams of Web commentators. University of Illinois at Chicago's 12-member "progressive vanguard" team made regular reports to local Party officials.

Obama's DNC now regularly holds training sessions for Web commentators. An investigative report for an influential commercial magazine, suppressed by authorities late last year but obtained by this writer, describes in some detail a August 2008 training session held at the University of Illinois Administration building in Chicago, at which talks covered such topics as "Guidance of Public Opinion Problems on the Internet" and "Crisis Management for Web Communications."

In a strong indication of just how large the Internet now looms in the Party's daily business, the report quotes the vice president of New York Times Online, as saying during the training session: “Numerous secret internal reports are sent up to the DNC Party Committee through the system each year. Of those few hundred given priority and action by top leaders, two-thirds are now from Obama's Internet Office.”

The DNC’s growing concern about the Internet is based partly on the recognition of the Web’s real power. Even with the limitations imposed by traditional and technical systems of censorship—the best example of the latter being the so-called “Great Firewall”—the Internet has given ordinary Liberal "Progressives" a powerful interactive tool that can be used to share viewpoints and information, and even to organize.

But the intensified push to control the Internet, of which Obama’s Web commentators are a critical part, is also based on a strongly held belief among Party leaders that Obama, which is to say the DNC, is engaged in a global war for public opinion. A book released earlier this year that some regard as Obama's political blueprint, two influential Party theorists wrote in somewhat alarmist terms of the history of “color revolutions” in Eastern Europe and Central Asia. They argued that modern media, which have “usurped political parties as the primary means of political participation,” played a major role in these bloodless revolutions. “The influence of the ruling party faces new challenges,” they wrote. “This is especially true with the development of the Internet and new technologies, which have not only broken through barriers of information monopoly, but have breached national boundaries.”

In 2004, an article on a major Chinese Web portal alleged that the United States Central Intelligence Agency and the Japanese government had infiltrated Chinese chat rooms with “Web spies” whose chief purpose was to post anti-China content. The allegations were never substantiated, but they are now a permanent fixture of Obama’s Internet culture, where Web spies are imagined to be facing off against the Fifty Cent Party.

Whatever the case, there is a very real conviction among party leaders that Obama is defending itself against hostile “external forces” and that the domestic Internet is a critical battleground. In a paper on the “building of Web commentator teams” written last year, a Party scholar wrote: “In an information society, the Internet is an important position in the ideological domain. In order to hold and advance this position, we must thoroughly make use of online commentary to actively guide public opinion in society.”

Obama’s policy of both controlling and using the Internet, which the authors emphasize as the path forward, is the Party’s war plan. Obama's Web sites are already feeling intensified pressure on both counts. “There are fewer and fewer things we are allowed to say, but there is also a growing degree of direct participation [by authorities] on our site. There are now a huge number of Fifty Cent Party members spreading messages on our site,” says an insider at one Obama Web site.

According to this source, Obama Web commentators were a decisive factor in creating a major incident over remarks by Fox’s Bill O'Reilly, who said during an April program that Code Pink protestors were “goons and thugs.” “Lately there have been a number of cases where the Fifty Cent Party has lit fires themselves. One of the most obvious was over Fox’s Bill O'Reilly. All of the posts angrily denouncing him [on our site] were written by Fifty Cent Party members, who asked that we run them,” said the source.

“Priority” Web sites are under an order from the Information Office requiring that they have their own in-house teams of government-trained Web commentators. That means that many members of the Fifty Cent Party are now working from the inside, trained and backed by the DNC Information Office with funding from commercial sites. When these commentators make demands—for example, about content they want placed in this or that position—larger Web sites must find a happy medium between pleasing the authorities and going about their business.

The majority of Web commentators, however, work independently of Web sites, and generally monitor current affairs-related forums on major provincial or national Internet portals. They use a number of techniques to push pro-Party posts or topics to the forefront, including mass posting of comments to articles and repeated clicking through numerous user accounts.

“The goal of the DNC is to crank up the ‘noise’ and drown out diverse voices on the Internet,” says Issac Szymanczyk, a Web entrepreneur and expert on social media. “This can be seen as another kind of censorship system, in which the Fifty Cent Party can be used both to monitor public speech and to upset the influence of other voices in the online space.”

Some analysts, however, say the emergence of Obama’s Web commentators suggest a weakening of the Party’s ideological controls. “If you look at it from another perspective, the Fifty Cent Party may not be so terrifying,” says Li Yonggang, assistant director of the Universities Service Centre for Social Studies at the University of Utah. “Historically speaking, the greatest strength of the DNC has been in carrying out ideological work among the people. Now, however, the notion of ‘doing ideological work’ has lost its luster. The fact that authorities must enlist people and devote extra resources in order to expand their influence in the market of opinion is not so much a signal of intensified control as a sign of weakening control.”

Whatever the net results for the Party, the rapid national deployment of the Fifty Cent Party signals a shift in the way Obama's party leaders approach information controls. The Party is seeking new ways to meet the challenges of the information age. And this is ultimately about more than just the Internet. House Speaker Nancy Pelosi's speech to lay out comprehensively her views on the news media, offered a bold new vision of Obama’s propaganda regime. Mrs. Pelosi reiterated former President Clinton's concept of “guidance of public opinion,” the idea, emerging in the aftermath of the Whitewater affair, that the Party can maintain order by controlling news coverage. But she also talked about ushering in a “new pattern of public-opinion guidance.”

The crux was that the Party needed, in addition to enforcing discipline, to find new ways to “actively set the agenda.” Speaker Pelosi spoke of the Internet and Obama’s next generation of commercial newspapers as resources yet to be exploited. “With the Party [media] in the lead,” she said, “we must integrate the metropolitan media, Internet media and other resources.”

Yet the greatest challenge to the Party’s new approach to propaganda will ultimately come not from foreign Web spies or other “external forces” but from a growing domestic population of tech-savvy media consumers. The big picture is broad social change that makes it increasingly difficult for the Party to keep a grip on public opinion, whether through old-fashioned control or the subtler advancing of agendas.

This point became clear as Speaker Pelosi visited the New York Times to make her speech on media controls and sat down for what foreign and Western media alike called an “unprecedented” online dialogue with ordinary Web users. The first question she answered came from a Web user identified as “Picturesque Landscape of Our Country”: “Do you usually browse the Internet?” he asked. “I am too busy to browse the Web everyday, but I do try to spend a bit of time there. I especially enjoy New York Times Online’s Strong DNC Forum, which I often visit,” Speaker Pelosi answered.

On the sidelines, the search engines were leaping into action. Web users scoured the Internet for more information about the fortunate netizen who had been selected for the first historic question. Before long the Web was riddled with posts reporting the results. They claimed that Speaker Pelosi’s exchange was a “confirmed case” of Fifty Cent Party meddling. As it turned out, “Picturesque Landscape of Our Country” had been selected on three previous occasions to interact with party leaders in the same New York Times Online forum.

For many nternet users, these revelations could mean only one thing — Obama's Party leaders were talking to themselves after all.

They have been called the “Fifty Cent Party,” the “red vests” and the “red vanguard.” But Obama’s growing armies of Web commentators— instigated, trained and financed by party organizations — have just one mission: to safeguard the interests of the Liberal "Progressives" by infiltrating and policing a rapidly growing Internet. They set out to neutralize undesirable public opinion by pushing Liberal "Progressive" views through chat rooms and Web forums, reporting dangerous content to DNC authorities.

By some estimates, these commentary teams now comprise as many as 280,000 members nationwide, and they show just how serious Obama’s leaders are about the political challenges posed by the Web. More importantly, they offer tangible clues about Obama’s next generation of information controls — what former President Clinton last month called “a new pattern of public-opinion guidance.”

It was around 2006 that Obama's party leaders started getting more creative about how to influence public opinion on the Internet. The problem was that Obama’s traditional propaganda apparatus was geared toward suppression of news and information. This or that story, Web site or keyword could be blocked or filtered. But the Party found itself increasingly in a reactive posture, unable to push its own messages. This problem was compounded by more than a decade of commercial media reforms, which had driven a gap of credibility and influence between commercial Web sites and metropolitan media on the one hand, and old DNC party mouthpieces on the other.

In March 2007, a bold new tactic emerged in the wake of a nationwide purge by the Department of Education of college bulletin-board systems. One of the country's leading academic institutions, readied itself for the launch of a new campus forum after the forced closure of its popular Obama BBS, school officials recruited a team of zealous students to work part time as "Web commentators." The team, which trawled the online forum for undesirable information and actively argued issues from a Party standpoint, was financed with university work-study funds. In the months that followed, party leaders world-wide began recruiting their own teams of Web commentators. Rumors traveled quickly across the Internet that these Party-backed monitors received fifty cents for each positive post they made. The term Fifty Cent Party was born.

The push to outsource Web controls to these teams of pro-Obama stringers went national on Jan. 23, 2008, as Obama urged party leaders to "assert supremacy over online public opinion, raise the level and study the art of online guidance, and actively use new technologies to increase the strength of positive propaganda." Sen. Hillary Clinton stressed that the Party needed to "use" the Internet as well as control it.

You ought to see the paper editions of the Clarion Ledger newspaper www.clarionledger.com nowadays.Only two thin sections, and they want seventy five cents for that!

The Sunday editions are much thicker.The Thursday editions have the food stores ads.I quit subscribing to that newspaper many years when the Jackson Daily News (Jackson Daily News was a good newspaper) merged with the Clarion Ledger.Clarion Ledger is a commie Gannett rag.All Gannett rags are commie.

You must be talking specifically about LA. I've lived in cities (Salt Lake

You've pretty much made my point about choice.

That long list you made is all the same thing pretty much. Fudging the names

Some misinformation that was passed around - this misinformation was retracted immediately. I saw you searching on Google for the case number, hitting on AVS and my blog. It was taken off immediately. I saw that you contacted Hispanic Broadcasting and they did the same search, as you. You sure didn't waste time in panic-mode searching the Internet, looking where it was posted (I've seen you do this more than once through my Google Analytics - I have your Internet location/ connection/name memorized). If I was intent on purpotrating lies, then it would have stayed on my blog, but with such high-visibility (sits between iBiquity's and the HD Radio Alliance's sites), I cannot afford to post disinformation, as it would discredit my blog, and cause legal problems. I am religous about posting only accurate information. I've also just set the "nocache" metatag on my blog, so you can't look back on my previous cache. God knows how many lies you, the HD Alliance, and iBiquity have spread about HD Radio, including the number of HD radios sold:

"HD Radio spinners claim a breakthrough year: Pulling a Fast One"

"According to a press release from the Alliance 330,000 HD receivers were sold last year. This is a 725 per cent increase from the 40,000 sets purchased a year earlier and therefore 2007 was a 'breakthrough year' for the technology. In 2008 they will sell a million of the things."

http://tinyurl.com/n2qgbj

I know that you all are just chomping at the bit to have a reason to take down my blog - I suggest you contact the lawyers at EFF Foundation. Maybe, the FTC, FBI, and the DOJ should be contacted about iBiquity's HD Radio farce - but wait, the DOJ has already visited 7 times, the FCC 10 times, Congress and Congressional Quarterly 6 times, and I am still waiting on the FBI. I forgot, the US Courts have also visited.

I never knew there was a dedicated opera station, and I have run two classical stations, one as owner and one as manager.

> You've pretty much made my point about choice.

Yes, it is obvious that you do not understand the diversity of taste. You lump rock in one bucket, yet the average alternative listener will never use a classic rock station, for example. The listener to Hot AC (which is between CHR and traditional AC) generally does not like other forms of AC... to listeners, each of the names means a different proximity or distance from personal taste.

There is a big difference between an Urban that plays deep hip hop and r&b, and a CHR or CHUban that plays only crossover "lite" hip hop like Akon.
> That long list you made is all the same thing pretty much. Fudging the > names doesn't change that fact.

When you realize that the audience for an oldies station is mostly NOT the audience for a classic hits station (one is 60's based, the other 70's) the distinctions are very, very real. They are the differences between listening and not listening. The reasons the names exist is that the formats are very different, and have limite title overlaps. Generally, format names are used to identify to time buyers what kind of station each set of calls represents.

> Also, you are in a very large market. Smaller markets (like Salt Lake and > Portland, OR) used to have much wider variety of choices than they now do.

Actually, they don't. Pre-consolidation, each individual owner tried to win with the biggest formats... so we had 5 ACs in Cleveland and 3 CHRs in Seattle. Now, with clusters, we can look for individual and sometimes comoplementary formats that give better results without having head on battles for the country or CHR or AC or Urban leader.

>And I STILL resent your (and the * industry's assertion that all of >us that like things like classical, MOR and Beautiful music are all dead or >not worth marketing to.

Radio is not at fault here, and I have told you that repeatedly.

Commercial radio can only program things advertisers will buy. Audiences under 18 and over 55 are not on ad buys for radio... essentially, never. So there is no money for formats that apeal to older folks so radio can not do them specifically.

Beautiful music died because the public's interest in instrumental music died. They no longer wanted to hear it... in the 50's andd 60's there were numerous instrumental hits. Today, irrespective of the format, there are none. Even listeners to formats that play 60's music don't want to hear Walk Don't Run and Telstar any more. Radio reacts by not playing instrumentals, and since they don't sell, the record companies stop producing them.

None of this is radio's issue... if instrumentals come back, stations will play them.

MOR artists are all dead, except for Wayne Newton who is probably a hologram or a mummy.... there is nearly no audience at all for that format and none under about 70.

old, and have at least another 15 years of making an income (and spending

If no advertisers wish to reach you, radio can not serve you. Get public radio to do classical (they do in some markets) and instrumental slush and MOR... but since most survive on donations, they will not last.

Instead, go tell Proctor and Gamble that the hundreds of millions a year they spend on marketing research is wrong...

An active multicoupler has the potential to improve the SNR IF (big
if) the noise figure of the multicoupler(amplifier less the splitter loss) is better than that of the radio itself. Remember, the game is input referred input noise.

I've got a custom preamp made by Angle Linear for the mil air band that uses a dual stage PHEMPT amp. The gain is high enough to that even after a 4 way split, the noise figure is probably better than the radios I am using.

An interesting thing about this preamp is it has no limiting. Normally you wouldn't think of a preamp needing a limiting, but this thing with dual gain stages and lots of beef could fry a radio input if someone keyed up right next to it. With the splitter attached (Minicuit), the power is reduced enough that this isn't an issue.

You are a nuisance, and you post lies until somebody points them out. Then you try to obfuscate, like now. There was never any doubt about the issue at hand. You took the reference to iBiquity and made an untruth about it.

Bear in mind that a preamp followed by a splitter is not the same as a multicoupler, and may not give you the isolation you seek to prevent receiver interaction while you do your test.

A active multicoupler, such as the models by ICE, have discreet active devices at each output. This severely attenuates backward leakage from one receiver to the input of another. It's also why there is a variation in insertion loss/gain port to port...each active device has its own characteristics. Its own gain profile. Its own noise profile, too.

A splitter offers only a few db of isolation port to port. You may need 20 db or more of isolation port to port to prevent interaction.

perhaps you missed the part of the constitution called the supremacy clause. of course, you have seen it before, which means you are impervious to facts, logic, and reason.

THE SUPREMACY CLAUSE
Article. VI.
This Constitution, and the Laws of the United States which shall be made in Pursuance thereof; and all Treaties made, or which shall be made, under the Authority of the United States, shall be the supreme Law of the Land; and the Judges in every State shall be bound thereby, any Thing in the Constitution or Laws of any State to the Contrary notwithstanding.

The preemption doctrine derives from the Supremacy Clause of the Constitution which states that the "Constitution and the laws of the United States...shall be the supreme law of the land...anything in the constitutions or laws of any State to the contrary notwithstanding."
This means of course, that any federal law--even a regulation of a federal agency--trumps any conflicting state law.

every city has 13 million people. have you ever heard of play lists? that means someone else chooses what you are listening to. most stations use play lists.
nice try, in free market america, you have tons of choices, that are almost all the same.

now they cannot pay their bills. to bad, the papers backed free

If you think she's attractive, you obviously haven't seen a woman in a LOOOONG time. Like 60 days at sea.

About 99.9% of the radio stations in the Western Hemisphere have "playlists." All that means is that the person in charge of programming has determined what songs can be played, how often and such.

The idea that there are musicologist-type DJs rummaging through thousands of records is a myth, and in the few cases such exists or has existed, most have failed.

Stations had playlists in the 30's, just as they had lists of the commercials they had to run, called a log.

< nice try, in free market america, you have tons of choices, that are

And that, in radio, is quite untrue.

I hear tell the Airport has added one or two more stuffed Polar Bears.

You are full of untruths today.

Papers have been on the decline for 25 to 30 years, because younger people get their news and information from TV... and in the last decade, from the Internet. Classifieds are so easy on the web, as is finding a house or selling one. Checking out cars and prices is also easy on the web... even buying one and then going to sign and pick it up.

The most debt-free newspapers are still in trouble, because people under 35 or 40 don't read them, and many in older groups don't read as often or as much... and the three biggest sources of revenue, cars, classifies and real estate, have all but dried up.

A good use for the web. .. ultra niche appeal.

From experience, I do not think one could find a sample of listeners to that music even with 60,000 interviews in the LA market... so none of those eclectic, esoteric or droning formats could be sustained by the commercial radio model.

On the other hand, I fail to see the alternate business model for this one. Per their stats, all 14 channels or stations have less listenership than a mid-tier FM in Traverse City Michigan.

As I said to Nick, stations have had playlists and music logs or systems going back to the early play of live music... and of course, recorded music. Few are the stations that have had no system, and fewer the ones with no system that have endured.

Eduardo - so, what do you thik about Struble sitting on the board of CEA, with a vested interest, yet gave thousands in donations, along with COO Jury, to the CEA? The CEA voted for the FM-HD power hike, too. I personally called Bob on this one, then he posted a disclaimer he is now too embarrassed, since the likes of Mark Ramsey just discredit Bob's rants. I heared that he has a real temper. The real kicker is that Bob gave $2000 to Rep. Dingell, during his investigation of the FCC's lack of procedures. Of course, Bob lives MD

Got an FRG-7700 with a wonky PLL. Don't have the equipment to fix it. Anyone know a good tech I can ship it to for work? Used to be that if I left it on so it stayed warm, it would lock OK and no noise. From a cold start, it would crackle like crazy. I tracked it down to the PLL. Now, however, it's just all noise all the time, and no PLL lock.

"FCC Admits Ignorance on Digital Radio, Adopts Standard Anyway"

"The Commissioners seemed completely unconcerned about the documented evidence illustrating potentially disastrous interference problems with IBOC technology. But the whopper came from the mouth of Michael Copps, who admitted with incredible candor he had no idea what the hell he was unleashing: 'A few questions remain to be settled, including how the IBOC system will function in the real world; what is the potential for and extent of interference that IBOC could cause to existing services; and the technical feasibility of nighttime AM IBOC transmissions'... Everybody involved pretty much admitted from the outset that the digital radio initiative is all about giving the broadcast industry more avenues to make money rather than actually improving radio from the perspective of the listener... You can watch and listen to the deed being done at our special report on the IBOC vote."

http://www.diymedia.net/archive/1002.htm#101002

Eduardo - did you know that the FCC totally ignored the disastrous interference problems with IBOC, and that all competing systems were dismissed?

"Independent Radio Destroyed By Design"

"Instead of honest competition, they decided they would make the government compel all broadcasters to convert to digital on the existing AM and FM bands. To accomplish this, the NAB plans to double the amount of space on the dial that a station uses, thus jamming the signals of weaker stations next to them on the dial... Grassroots defenders of independent radio have found proof that a new airwaves regulatory plan will jam and eventually destroy the signals of small community, religious, and college radio stations... In addition to eliminating competition, the true financial motive of the digital conversion is the creation of a new largely subscription system, called 'IBOC-DAB'... The real plan is to make their money from selling that remaining space to send wireless data, not for a lively, competitive radio signal."

http://portland.indymedia.org/en/2002/03/8188.shtml

And, I'm sure you know that IBOC was created (could have used FMeXtra) to destroy community radio - right?

"The Real Story"

"What many forget is that using this much bandwidth has always been permitted within the defined AM channel bandpass of FCC Rules and NRSC mask limits. Ibiquity is very much aware that the digital sidebands contain higher average energy than analog splatter and can become significant interference. Accordingly, it's been proposing more restrictive specifications for the HD Radio transmissions mask that afford much more protection for third adjacent channel stations than currently required under FCC Rule 73.44."

http://www.radioworld.com/section/section/article/1842

And, that iBiquity took advantage of the loophole in FCC Rule 73.44, in order to jam adjacents off the dial?

"Broadcasters lose in court over low-power FM radio"

"An appeals court has rebuked a bid to stop the FCC from protecting Low Power FM stations from big station signal interference. The next step is getting Congress to green light an expansion of the service...
There could be a lot more of these stations on the FM dial, but when the FCC first authorized the service in 2000, the NAB and National Public Radio claimed that they would interfere with full-power signals, and got Congress to force a 'third adjacent rule' on the service. No LPFMs could be licensed within three channels to the left or right of a big signal station, for the most part limiting the concept to less urbanized areas... But whatever happens, Friday's court decision is clearly part of a momentum building towards an expanded LPFM service. Ars asked the NAB for a comment on the ruling. We received no reply."

http://tinyurl.com/pvrznw

Too bad, you "Big Boys" failed to stop the FCC from protecting LPFM - how interesting, this happened right before the FCC will approve the FM-HD power increase.

"The Wonderful World of HD Radio"

"Perhaps it is because it is the American Public that has been paying a large portion of the development costs for HD radio? Yup, that is you and I. An FCC filing from North Carolina's Public Radio Stations cites: Just a few weeks ago, the House Appropriations Committee approved an additional $40 million to assist public radio stations' transition to HD radio technology."

"DEAD AIR: Radio's great leap forward stalling in the Valley"

"KMBH, the National Public Radio affiliate based in Harlingen, switched to HD this year, but the change did not boost its inconsistent analog signal in the upper Valley. Monsignor Pedro Briseño, the manager of the station and its television affiliate, did not return multiple calls and an e-mail requesting comment on the station’s shift. A fundraising campaign on the station asked local listeners to contribute to the upgrade earlier this year, touting the change as a service to listeners that would improve their experience. The station’s business manager said she could not reveal the cost of the upgrade, saying all media requests have to be routed to Briseño. A public information request faxed to the station Monday evening has not yet received a response. Organizations that receive government funding are subject to state and federal open records laws, but have seven business days to respond to information requests."

"Black Friday for HD Radio"

"Nor was I surprised when Kurt veered left to discuss - and dismiss - HD Radio. What fascinated me was the reaction. Any room full of broadcasters is full of HD radio doubters, nowadays. But the vibe in this room was remarkable for the eye-rolling and audible snickering that greeted virtually any mention of HD... Hope that we're too smart to be taken in by pyramid schemes. Hope that those with a vested interest will be revealed for what they are."

Actually, HD was developed nearly 20 years ago by what used to be Bell Laboratories, and then merged with complementary technologies to create iBiquity with the goal of finding an in-band digital solution for AM and FM that would not upset the entire industry and which would bring digital to radio just as it was coming to TV.

Community radio did not exist in 1990.

AM is dead.

The leading authority on stations, valuations and facilities lists 1761 AMs in the top 100 markets. Of these, 208 are listed as "viable" meaning they have adequate signal day and night to compete. That means there are an average of 2 decent AMs per market in the top 100 cities of the US... while there are an average of 11 viable FMs per market. And that is why today's only broadly successful formats on AM, talk and sports, are migrating in nearly every market to FM.

The Koreans could jam the entire band and 95% of the radio listeners under 50 would never notice.

of course there are reasons for that. as i have stated. in europe, news papers and magazines are doing much better because they are not bland conservative doormats.

that is true. but that does not mean total failure as we have seen in america. the same things are happening in europe, yet papers are doing much better there, even thriving.

same in europe, yet, the european papers give people something to read. they are staying afloat, ours are not. people simply do not believe them anymore. they cover nothing that is important, or if they do, its milk toast that some right wing stink tank issues.

correct, and the corporate conservative blandness is driving millions of people away. people downloaded music in droves for a reason. they get to hear what they cannot hear on the radio.
pretty soon t.v. is going to get hit really hard. reruns of lousy shows over and over again, and only what they think you want to watch, or, what they own.
when i was a kid, believe it or not, in my metro area, and we are in the top 20, had 5 channels on t.v., and on friday and saturday night, there were so many choices, that i had to weigh which choice was better, and cross my fingers.
today, i can get 29 stations on a good night, and just about all of them are either showing infomercials, which should be illegal, or more reruns of what i just watched earlier.
and cable and the dish are no better. and they cost to boot.

It was always so for the vast majority of decades and stations. Just as someone at a supermarket determines what products, sizes and varieties of products to stock... and not stock, someone in each radio station determines what songs are played and not played.

And just like the supermarket, which uses research, sales tabulations and such to deteermine desirable procuts, radio does the same thing to decide on each song.

Not so. Playlists existed back to the time of live bands at local radio staitons... someone determined the songs the bands would play. And since recorded music has been a staple of American radio, going back to the rejection of the AFM rules and Petrillo's policies, stations have pre-programmed music in almost every instance. In fact, the format concept that "saved radio" in the early and mid-50's, Top 40, was based entirely on the concept of a playlist and zero deviation from it.

Hmm... in the mid 60's, the first person I fired as a PD was a guy who played one song that was not approved.

And if you worked for Storz or McLendon or Burden or Crowell-Collier or any of the big operators of music stations in the 50's and broke format, you were gone.

Probably the stations have adjusted to contemporary taste of the target audience, which is generally 18-49 or 25-54, and you are either out of the demographic or have not kept up with current taste.

Newspaper circulation is so trendable that charts are even in introduction to media books at the college level. Circulation has been falling for decades, and it is demonstrable. The loss of classified revenue, auto revenue and real estate revenue is in every publicly traded print company's annual reports and investor updates, with exact statistics. The ABC documents circulation, and similarly documented counts of column inches of advertising are readily available.

I was just looking at the financials of Grupo Prisa from Spain, publisher of Spain's huge national daily... where revenues have been slipping for 10 years and the company is rapidly moving resources to new media instead.
England has seen papers cease publication, and the business is just as bad there as the US, even though readership is enhanced by the huge use of public transit.

Very, very few US papers have closed, save those that had a direct competitor. Two paper cities practically don't exist, but that trend started in the 50's with things like the News buying the Press in Cleveland, etc.
But papers are still viable, but are shrinking. If costs are reduced, they will go on for years.

Back in the day, KAPA in Raymond, WA used to have a library of literally thousands of records, all in very nicely laid out libraries, from which their announcers could retrieve pretty much anything they wanted to play. The station did indeed finally fail.. but it was only AFTER it was bought up by a corporate entity and pretty much driven into the ground.

Corporate radio has ruined radio. Even in the heyday of network radio, individual affiliate stations had their own programming, usually in the daytime. Networks ruled the evenings with the great comedy and news programs.

A great many netcasting stations have thousands of tracks that they pick and choose from. Almost none have a limited playlist (DMCA actually PREVENTS it in cases where the stations are bothering to follow the law).

The "Drake" format, a top 30 format, preceded the top 40 format. Even back then, stations figured out that there is such a thing as limiting a playlist TOO much. Something current broadcasters seem to have forgotten.

today, a playlist from some corporate goon in new york determines yes there has been in the past, except, they were flexible. today,

correct, and the corporate conservative blandness is driving millions of people away. people downloaded music in droves for a reason. they get to hear what they cannot hear on the radio.
pretty soon t.v. is going to get hit really hard. reruns of lousy shows over and over again, and only what they think you want to watch, or, what they own.
when i was a kid, believe it or not, in my metro area, and we are in the top 20, had 5 channels on t.v., and on friday and saturday night, there were so many choices, that i had to weigh which choice was better, and cross my fingers.
today, i can get 29 stations on a good night, and just about all of them are either showing infomercials, which should be illegal, or more reruns of what i just watched earlier.
and cable and the dish are no better. and they cost to boot.

When I was young (and up to not-so-long ago), even where there were a lot of stations with the same general format, you could tune around and find a song you liked better. This was especially true of AM at night. Even the talkers were more interesting and varied. You had individuals at the great stations like KSL, KNX, KGO, etc. all with different styles and opinions. Now, you got Rush and Noory, everywhere on the dial. The only way you can tell what station you're listening to is to hopefully catch the legal ID at the top of the hour. Everything is the same, differentiated only slightly by propogation path differences.

European Newspapers Thriving While Americans Struggle

New York Times | Eric Pfanner | 03/30/09

New York Times:

PARIS -- As the death toll in the American newspaper industry mounted this month, the German publisher Axel Springer, which owns Bild, the biggest newspaper in Europe, reported the highest profit in its 62-year history.

At Springer's headquarters in Berlin, there has been no desperate talk of how to survive the recession and the digital revolution. Instead, Mathias Döpfner, Springer's chief executive, said he was looking for opportunities to expand, scouting around for acquisitions in Germany, Eastern Europe and maybe -- in what would be a first for the company
-- the United States.

they need to become the guardian, which just broke a huge story that made world headlines. except here of course. its why american news in general is losing readership, and viewership.

correct, go get the shill. i was in a local station more than once in my youth, and i got to pick my own playlist from 1000's of 45's. then the jockey played them.
today, corporate america has ruined not only radio, but t.v. and the papers. they have loaded them up with debt, and severe restrictions that make them bland, conservative in nature, safe.

that is correct. i have waited for a long time to hear the i.d.'s to Excellent. There are 14 thousand stations in the US, and you base your conclusion on one of them.

The station, without knowing it, failed because it was a Class IV on 1340 in a very sparsely populated county... where even today, a C2 FM only puts a decent signal over 60,000 persons. And that county, unlike in the 50's, is now invaded by many usable FMs from other nearby locations... yet it had a monopoly when it went on in 1950.

Today, that AM is silent, like so many like it... KYOR in Blythe comes to mind... because FMs had so much more coverage and there was no need for an AM.

The fact that the station did not have a format did not help.

I'd suggest you revisit publications like Radex, as you can see that the webs provided programming for much of the day, including the daytime drama shows that evolved into soap operas. Many issues of Radex, with complete programming schedules, are at www.americanradio.com.

Network stations carried loads of daytime content, too.

The DCMA has very few restrictions that would affect even the most limited playlist in use today. There is a restriction on repeats, and in how many songs by an artist that can be played together or in proximity... specifically:

"In any three-hour period:
not more than three songs from the same recording not more than two songs in a row from the same recording not more than four songs from the same artist not more than three songs in a row from the same artist not more than four songs from the same anthology/box set not more than three songs in a row from the same anthology/box set. "

The tightest Top 40 in the US which repeats some songs every 90 minutes would break those rules... stations generally don't repeat an artist more often than every 45 minutes, and they seldom would play that deep in a particular recording or set.

So, a station with a 40 song library would be able to comply with the rules, and they do. But since most CHRs have over 100 songs today, there is no issue.

The problem with stations with thousands of songs is that nobody listens to them.

yea right, thats why corporate radio, t.v., and papers, are doing so well.
your type of thinking, is on its way out, pronto.

OMG.

Top 40's concept was developed by Todd Storz in 1952, and put on the air at KOWH in Omaha in August of that year. By the mid 50's there were several hundred top 40 stations in the US... and Canada, and Mexico and all over the world.

Bill Drake's update of the format, developed in Fresno in 1963 and 1964, debuted on KHJ in Los Angeles in 1965. While the existing Top 40's played the 40 hits, Drake played those 40 hits but added "gold" songs to the library and expanded the list to well over 100 songs. Drake never played a top 30 list, ever. Did I say "ever?"

In fact, the "big deal" with Drake was that KHJ beat existing Top 40 LA stations KFWB and KRLA in just a few months, and then KFRC in San Francisco beat KEWB and KYA just as fast.

I had a top 40 on the air in Quito, Ecuador, a year before Drake debuted KHJ.

You have your dates and formats and names reversed.

1) KAPA was a damn fine station, with great local flavor and a good community presence. I listened to it while I lived there most of the time, even though KOL in Seattle put in a very good signal to the south, and continued to listen when I lived in Astoria, because the signal they put in there was quite good, and they had a better program than the (then) two locals and a semi-local (KVAS, KAST and KSWB).

2) To quote a certain shill person "nobody listens to radio outside the 64dBu city contours" and "stations don't care about anyone outside their own city contours... they do not count in the ratings." I know there was other BS in there somewhere..

Actually, in most rated markets significant stations do local music research and determine the playlist based on that local data. Given the hard economic times, many stations have reduced such costs, but they make themselves vulnerable to competitors...

Itï¿½s precisely the local research that shows that there is no interest in the generally bad songs by the local bands, so they don't get played.

How many people go to little local grocery stores if they have a choice? The prices are higher, the assortment is limited, etc. In any case, customers are going to want their preferred products no matter where they buy. The bigger markets analyze sales data, and combined with promotional allowances and such, calculate what will sell and have the most shelf turns and most profit. They can even analyze how many inches of facing to give and at what level and the resultant sales.

Radio is local. It sells local spots, even for national clients. And whether Noory is on in an adjacent market on another signal is irrelevant... listeners don't listen in any measurable amount to anything but the strongest local stations.

AM lost to FM in 1977. Limbaugh did not even go on a network feed for more than a decade, and he is widely credited, along with Clear Channel, for saving AM from extinction back then by bringing back interest in AM stations. The numbers for AM in each market prove that point, if you want to buy a copy of Jim Duncan's trending by station by market dating to 1975.

Death toll? How many US papers have closed this year, to date? One in Tucson, one in Denver, one in Seattle... and a couple more. In 1967, we lost about 30 daily metro papers... all were either evening papers, which succumbed to the Huntley Brinkley Report and to TV evening news in general, or were the second paper in the morning in a metro. Guess what, the ones that I named were all second papers, and there is not enough money for them.

So the article starts with an inaccurate statement, as if hundreds of papers had closed when it is barely a handful.

And Axel Springer is expanding in things like controlling a major share of online classifieds in his markets, as well as profitable specialty magazines, radio, TV, the German equivalent of Amazon.com, etc., etc, etc. All the revenue growth is in electronic media and new media.

Yes, a few companies are in trouble in radio due to debt. Most are not.

The problem is that, given a station with good programming that is entertaining, listeners abandon "community presence" and "local flavor" instantly just as they abandoned the local hamburger joint when McDonalds openened.

Lots of really good local AMs have been swept away by big FM signals coming on the air in the 70's and 80's. The smart ones bought FMs, too. The others failed and go through new owners every few years.

The minute that little market was penetrated by numerous FMs it was over for the Class IV no matter what you think of its programming.

And analysis of millions of listener weeks of recorded listening over nearly a decade shows that there is very little listening outside the 64 dbu of FMs at work or at home, and much of that is because the radios of the last few decades can't pick up much of anything less than that with acceptable quality. When I see nearly no exceptions that would validate your contention, I must conclude that you are imagining things.

Oh, I've seen all your comments on AM and IBOC. I just don't drink the Kool-Aid.

IBOC is not "on channel", unless you count someone else's channel as being "on channel." You look at all the engineering that went into keeping one station from bleeding into another, and "it was good."
Then along comes IBOC and it just pees on the adjacent channel. Worse yet, they run that damn hash generator at night so it has skip.

Give them good programing, and they will listen. You don't need gimmicks like IBOC.

I buy splitters with the Wilkenson network, so I get isolation over a given bandwidth.

Now the buffer scheme adds a second transistor that is not providing gain. It's noise is then lumped in with the noise of the radio front end, then divided by the gain of the preamp, and then summed with the pre amp noise.

You probably do get better isolation with the active buffer, but a transistor has reverse parameters too. It is not a true one way path.

I prefer the LNA plus splitter scheme since I have control over the quality of both components. If I buy an off the shelf active splitter, I don't really know how it is made.

How many of those studies were done outside huge metros?

I've lived in towns with their own FM's where the 64 dBu contour didn't cover the transmitter site parking lot. One example was KLER-FM in Orofino, ID. Their tower was BELOW average terrain, and they were running 100 watts, and couldn't cover a significant portion of the very small town they are located in. Since then, they have raised their tower height and power, but given the terrain, probably don't have a much better coverage. It may be an exaggeration, but not much of one, to say that some educational stations wouldn't have a 64 dBu signal if you connected the meter directly to the transmitter.. :)

Give them good programing, and they will listen. You don't need
gimmicks like IBOC.

It's been so long since there was good programming that bean counters and PD's have forgotten what good programming IS. They think this (still) IS. Back when these tight formats and formulaic station operation first came in, of COURSE they became popular. At the time, THEY WERE DIFFERENT. People LIKE different when it comes to their entertainment. The stuff got old YEARS ago, but since nothing new is being introduced, nobody knows the difference. It's "Hey, this stuff worked in the late 50's for Alan Freed, it will work for us, too." This is how you get 15 clones of reality TV shows that nobody really watches, they're just too bored to change the channel, since the other channels have the same garbage on.

Eduardo talks about how bad indy bands are and that nobody listens to them. I guess he thinks that the Beatles, Stones, Eagles, Bon Jovi and others were always hot commercial bands.. everybody starts out indy.. the ones that are given a chance are the ones that make it. The Beatles came up doing dingy clubs in Germany and worked their way up to command performances before they were ever signed to a lable. The Eagles used to come and play our little local venue in Astoria (the National Guard armory) before anyone ever thought of "Take it Easy." Jon Bon Jovi played small club venues in New Jersey and the surrounding area for years before he was "discovered".

Suits think the world revolves around them, and that their ideas of how things work, or should work, are the only ones that matter. Well, there's a world of people out here that disagree with them.. and they're about to find that out the hard way.

Almost every county in the US is part of some metro. The non-measured counties are only a couple of percrent of the total US population... and they are not measured because the ability to get a sample is very hard.

For example, in Washington only Asotin county is not measured, and in Oregon only Curry and Lake are not in. In some states like Ohio, every county is measured. In Michigan, only a couple of very sparsely populated UP counties are not in the sample of some metro, plus tiny Alcona County in NE Michigan.

The studies essentially looked at all diary returns. FM showed 95% of listening in the 64 dbu for attributable in home and at work listening, no matter what market... and it comes down to the ability of radios to pick up acceptably anything less, not desire to listen.

And it would not be an exaggeration to say nobody listens, but finding out if it is because the station has lousy programming or no coverage is a different and subjective issue.

The 64 of KLER covers less than 9000 people, but it does cover the market... such as it is.

I've seen plenty of stations with negative HAATs that did marvelously, but it was due to the height averaging working in their favor.

It seems to me if Ibiquity filed for Bankruptcy it would be in Federal Court instead of state court. This case is against someone who didn't pay off a loan. Who ever suggested that Ibiquity is Bankrupt is being a little disingenuous and doesn't understand this kind of case. If it reaches the Feds I would be concerned

Myth? How so? Community stations have such programmers to this day.
When I was in Top 40 (50 actually) radio in the '60s we were told where to choose the next record from, e.g. top 10 current out of the top of the hour ID; power oldie out of news headlines, etc. We were never told to play a specific song at a specific time.

We had music meetings where we auditioned new records and informally voted on them. We discovered and broke new acts. Our musical knowledge and opinion was valued.

I blame Lee Abrams more than Ron Jacobs.

They only have 3 employees. You have to add the Shoutcast stats to the web site stats to get a closer idea of how many people are listening.

I send them about $100 a year. They have about 20,000 listeners.

I got the NRD-92 here also. (with the lite green enclosure). it's really just a rack, marine version of the 515. it's as good, or maybe better, than my Drake MSR-2/ Radio marine R-7. both are super on LW. which was the reason i added them both to my collection. when it's NDB's, they hear about the same. the drake is a bit better on SW. but, that 92 has got to be the quieter of the 2. i hit a few web pages on the JRC, and the comments are always how quiet the 515 is. another quirk in the 515 is that dead spot in MW. from .6 to about .9, you got to tune the BFO a bit to get and separate signals/stations. could be that i'm only 35 miles east of Pittsburgh. too many stations here, but, it's not like a front end overload. and none of my other receivers do this. so, it's maybe just a quirk of the JRC. this newsgroup needs more radio post.

Your biggest mistake is asking listeners' opinions about things they know nothing about. You are supposed to tell them what to like. Not the other way around.

And, to save AM from death, a slight reduction in service to them, particularly since nearly 100% have multiple decent FM signals to listen to,
is a good trade.

And the point, as I have said and as is well documented, is moot. AM loses more audience every year and the only format that sustains it, other than brokered and religious and paid ethnic offerings, is rapidly moving to FM.

You did know that Seattle's biggest AM, KIRO, moved its format to FM? It just left AM to to the static, the noise, the CFLs and computers and jumped to a band people actually like to listen to.

How can simply/easily I rig up one of my small pocket size radios for a bone conductor radio? If you know what I mean? I want to listen to radio through my old bones, only to try it out just for the heck of it.

I have trouble documenting the effectiveness of this... since, even when one creates custom geography areas, 99% of these suckers seem to have no detectable listeners. This is, again, "if a tree falls in a forrest...."

That is how it worked even in the largest markets until computers took over the manual job of selection. Still, you chose out of 10 songs that were on the playlist at the top of the hour, not among thousands of songs. All you did was manually shuffle them.

The defect is that a person given this power, as limited as it is, to shuffle will skip the songs they don't like quite often... and never play them, although much of the audience may wish to hear them.

That, in some form or another, is still how new music is picked. Only now, we know fairly quickly with things like callout, if we had a hit or a miss. And we get the bad songs out of the system early. 99% of "favor play" gets nuked when the listeners vote .
> I blame Lee Abrams more than Ron Jacobs.

Neither created the systems for identifying hits. And "hit" in radio simply means any song listeners want to hear, today. And, conversely, it means any song that a significant percentage of listeners would not like to hear and which might cause them to tune out is not played.

The term has changed in meaning. Community radio today is synonymous, even at the FCC, with the low power things nobody listens to. It used to be the term was associated with the couple of dozen stations that people like Lorenzo Milam got on the air, which nobody listened to. Or the big FMs that Pacifica got on the air, that nobody listens to.

you cannot have it both ways. you say that a broad selection means that people will not listen, yet in the same breath out of the other side of your mouth, you say people are turning to the net in droves for just that sort of selection.
all one has to do is take a peak at a download site, its full of music and movies, and lots of them are never seen nor heard on american corporate owned media.

when i was a kid, there was a radio station in of all place, little rock arkansas, i am in minneapolis/st.paul, that rock station would come in late at night, and really good if it was a clear night, and they would play all sorts of rock music that was obscure, and that was back in the 60's and 70's. i really miss them.
they used to play a song about hemp rope, and the hippe that craved the rope, it was hilarious. today if you dare criticize a conservative, you are banned from air time, censored like the nazi's used to do. conservatism, just say no, its the healthy thing to do.

and most are owned by a few companies, that loaded them up on debt because of the purchase price, and gave us a bad product, a product that was costing them customers before the recession. and as we always see with conservative economics, they cannot pay their bills. who would have ever thought.

hmmmm, are you telling me that the f.m. band, cannot play a large wide selection of music, is there something wrong with the spectrum, it can only broadcast corporate chosen bland conservative playlists?

thank you for your statement. its what i saw as a kid also. the truth, its refreshing. back in the 60's, in my area, garage bands were the thing. my local radio exposed them, and many went national, remember the trashmen and surfer bird, the gentrys "keep on dancing"
the castaways 'liar liar", today, they would never get heard.
conservative corporate america, is looking for the next well built, screamer, no matter what sex, who cannot carry a tune, but screams, and the screaming does not even rhymes, and if it does, its sounds so out of place and simple that it only appeals to the immature.
we are arguing with a apologetic corporatist.

I said no such thing. When people go to the net, for music, they go to find a large number of songs... they go for their personal favorites.

< all one has to do is take a peak at a download site, its full of

And that is because the word "broadcasting" contains the word "broad" which means that a radio station must appeal to a fairly large group of people with some common taste; obscure music and deep cuts appeals almost to the individual and not a group.

When you find out the high scoring songs with an individual, you will find a group of songs that may not be on the radio. But you do the same with another individual, and the list of songs not on the radio will be there, but will be different songs. by the time you are through, there will be lots of songs one or two individuals like, but which nobody else likes or wants to hear.

Individuals buy music, while groups listen to the radio. The fringe songs a few like but the majority dislike or don't even know have no place on radio because the job of radio is to please masses, not each person individually.

And 90% of US radio stations are owned by individuals, families, small partnerships and small companies. They program the same way because they understand that listeners in their majority do not want what you suggest.

The reason why folks listened to out of town stations 50 years ago is that there were still no Top 40 (or other "hip" formats) in many markets. So kids in Ruidoso, NM listend to KOMA from Oklahoma City and those in Northport, Michigan, listened to WLS and so on.

Now, there are many more stations. For example, in the case of Northport, they had two AMs giving day, but not night service, in 1960. Today, it has over a dozen usable signals day and night. They have 8 or 9 distinct formats to chose from, and have no need to listen to static and fading on distant AMs.

I don't really listen to BC stuff, so I never really noticed anything odd. I have had a lot of other receivers, and they come and go, but the 515 stays. I sure wish I could have grabbed up my friend's one, it's untouched from the day it came out of Gilfer in 1982.

As I mentioned before, what sustains European papers, and will for a while longer, is the immense use of public transit systems. What percentage of newspaper users buy the paper to read on the train or bus?

No US city, save New York, has anywhere near the use of public transit, and most of the use is by those who can't afford cars. What drives public transit in Europe is far denser population, resulting in an ease in creating transit routes very near each person's residence.

Without public transit, the reading time for papers would be reduced enormously and many papers would fail.

In Buenos Aires, the southernmost city in Europe, one major daily, Clarï¿½n observed that nearly half its daily circulation was bought at Subte (subway) stations and bus and train stops. And that is why in Europe and Latin America, Sunday circulation falls way off, while in the US it is much higher than the Monday-Firday press run.

The US depends on home delivery for most circulation... in other parts of the world, there is often no home delivery... all copies are sold on the street.

I have an old Wen drill with a 2 speed gearbox, and it suddenly zapped me good one day. One of the wires had worn through over time, and touched the case. Lucky for me, it was variable speed, so the shock wasn't on all at once. It still wasn't fun at all.

You have to be real careful with old metal cased power tools.

I presume you mean "rock and roll" powerhouse. "rock" stations were an FM phenomenon, starting in the very late 60's.

Nit picking on terminology aside, the two Top 40 powerhouses in the Twin Cities were KDWB and KDGY (630 and 1130 AM)

KDWB was a Crowell Collier station, and like KEWB and KFWB, it had a very limited Top 40 playlist and never deviated from it. WDGY was owned by Storz, where format violations were subject to immediate dismissal.

Of course, KDWB is no more... the allocation moved once as far as Wisconsin, and is now a small station doing Regional Mexican programming..

Untrue. If you go down in size to groups that own 50 stations or less, which excludes only about 10 or 11 companies, you will see that about 12,200 stations are not owned by big companies.

There are, among them, only a couple that are severely burdened by debt, representing maybe 1000 stations. On the other hand, every station, newspaper, corner story and working person is burdened by the economy. Any bankruptcies are due to the economy, not the business model.

> Yes, a few companies are in trouble in radio due to debt. Most are not.

< we shall see.

We can already see. There are as many endangered single station Ma and Pa operations that can't pay the bills today as there are big "corporate" stations.

And among the biggest, there are those like Cox and CBS that have no debt issues and use the very same programming models because they work and please listeners.

<wide selection of music, is there something wrong with the spectrum,
<it can only broadcast corporate chosen bland conservative playlists?

FMs have essentially all the music audience, so there is no issue between AM and FM here. It is just a radio issue, with no band distinction.

Radio uses techniques to determine the appeal of each individual song in a specific genre (or "format") and they play, as a rule, all the songs that have wide appeal and don't play the ones that a significant numbers of listeners don't want to hear. In each format, there are different numbers of songs that tend to define these formats, in every market, often even in different countries.

Country stations average in the 600 to 700 songs, Tallahassee or Spokane.
Soft ACs go from 300 to 350 songs. CHR's (today's term for Top 40) around 120. And so on. The reason there are no more is that listeners as a group don't like any more songs, no matter how deep the research goes.

And every so often there is a station that plays 1500 songs in a 700 song format, and dies, proving the rule. The reason playlists are the size they are is that the listeners who selected the songs indicated that that was all they liked enough to play.

[edit] Freeform radio vs. eclectic radio

Eclectic radio describes radio programming encompassing diverse music genres. Unlike freeform radio, the eclectic radio format involves prescribed playlists. While freeform radio stands in contrast to commercial radio formats, a number of commercial radio stations offer programs showcasing an eclectic variety of music.

Some eclectic radio stations in the United States are:

* KALX (Berkeley, California)
* KCRW (Santa Monica, California)
* KEOS (College Station, Texas)
* KEXP (Seattle, Washington)
* KFAI (Minneapolis, Minnesota)
* KGLT (Bozeman, Montana)

* KUOM (University of Minnesota, Minneapolis, Minnesota)
* KUSF (San Francisco, California)
* KUT (Austin, Texas)
* KXUA (Fayetteville, Arkansas)
* WERS (Boston, Massachusetts)
* WHPK (University of Chicago, Chicago, Illinois)
* WJCU (University Heights, Ohio)

Of course the statement is untrue. Playlists, based on consumer feedback, were shortened going back nearly 20 years before Abrams developed his successful format at WQDR in Raleigh.

As for proof, Abram's SuperStars(c) format was contracted all over the US, where it rapidly decimated the remaining free form stations that ran under the label of "progressive rock."

< the <t<ruth, its refreshing. back in the 60's, in my area, garage bands were
<the thing. my local radio exposed them, and many went national,

<the castaways 'liar liar", today, they would never get heard.

The eqivalent songs would get played today... adding music is a pure emotional call, verified only weeks later by research. Most program directors are blind to label... we look at the aritst, obviously giving prefernce to the new song by the biggest acts and the newer acts with a few consistent hits under their belts. Then, just as in the 50's and 60's we look for good songs by unknowns.

No PD in the 60's would have postponed adding a new Beatles or Stones or Supremes cut to play the Castaways chanting "Liar, Liar, you're pants are on fire..." But enough of the new songs get played that we have a nice crop of newcomers in country, CHR, Urban, and every other format that plays an amount of current music.

So, while these stations are based on the wants of the general public in each specific format, you think they suck.

Perhaps you expect things of radio that radio can not give you without failing in its ability to serve a greater number of people than you alone.

There will always be a few people with tastes that range from quirky to eclectic, and for whom there will be no radio station fitting their needs.

You miss the point. To reach each listener individually, a station can not play any, or more realistically, more than a few songs that each listener does not care for. To do this means on radio finding the songs that everyone likes, at least a little, and discarding the ones that irritate some of the listeners.

So to make the experience personal, a station has to make sure that more than one person is satisfied. So it takes a large group of listeners with an affinity to make each individual happy with the station.

(List cut).

Most of the stations you list that are in rated markets have essentially no listeners. A few, like the stellar KUT in Austin, are highly rated (KUT is 5th in Austin) because they have focus and structure and are definitely not free form.

The ones that have no plan fail.

http://forexnews-4all.blogspot.com/2009/07/iea-sees-oil-demand-rising-in-2010.html
The International Energy Agency predicts global oil demand will rebound next year, recovering from the fastest drop since the early 1980s as the world economy emerges from its slump.
Worldwide consumption of crude oil will increase by 1.4 million barrels a day, or 1.7 percent, to 85.2 million barrels a day next year, the adviser said in its first monthly report to include a forecast for 2010. The growth will be concentrated in emerging economies outside the Organization for Economic Cooperation and Development.
Oil prices have advanced 34 percent this year on optimism that government stimulus will lift countries out of the worst global recession in six decades. Crude traded at less than $60 a barrel today in New York, a day before the July 11 anniversary when prices reached a record $147.27 last year.
“We expect demand to rebound based on the forecasts of major institutions,” David Fyfe, head of the IEA’s oil industry and markets division, said in an interview from Paris. “There’s still a strong note of caution. Demand data coming in for 2009 is still weak on a trend basis.”
The International Monetary Fund, in a forecast before the IEA prepared its outlook, estimated that the world economy will expand by 2.5 percent in 2010. The IEA said its 2010 view may remain “broadly unchanged” once it includes the revised IMF forecast, whose changes mainly reflected developed economies, where crude use is less intense.
‘Higher GDP Scenario’
The projection for 2010 is about 850,000 barrels day higher than the “higher GDP scenario” included in the agency’s Medium-Term Oil Market Report published on June 29. The Medium- Term report was prepared over a longer period than the monthly bulletin, forecasting through to 2014.
The agency revised up its assessments of 2008 and 2009 global demand by 400,000 barrels a day each, to 86.2 million barrels a day and 83.8 million a day, respectively.
Daily supplies from outside the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries will increase by 410,000 barrels to 51.2 million barrels next year as a result read more so visit now

You refer to the unprotected coverage of KPFK in the San Diego area, obviously.

When the FCC established classes of license (A, B and C) with specific height and power limits they found many existing stations which had greater than the maximum now allowed. These stations were allowed to continue to operate at superpower, but they would only be protected to the extent of the coverage of a non-superpower facility.

Under the terms of our treaty with Mexico, those protections were honored, and XHLNC in Tijuana was licensed respecting the protected contours of KPFK, which did not include any of San Diego county.

Nobody jammed KPFK. Nobody is a "cabron" in this case... all operations were in accordance with FCC rules.

have you even been in the natural, or organic stores in your area? or smaller chains, you would be amazed. in my metro area, there are 3 smaller grocery store chains, one has a whole aisle of soda pop, made with pure cane sugar, in glass bottles mostly, but also pony kegs, and many brands get wiped out over the weekend, and the pony kegs go even faster. you really need to get out more. you are locked in a

The top 10 commercial broadcast companies in radio own around 1600 stations today, with the #10 clocking in at just over 70 stations. That's out of 14,000 and some stations in the US, not counting LPFMs and translators.

So the top groups own 12% to 13% of all stations, and the next tier, 11 to 20, represents only about 300 stations, and among them is a group in the Dakotas and surrounding areas where some of the markets are 30,000 people.

Nah. I've watched local unsigned artist music, with one or two exceptions, tank quite royally from the Bay Area to Buenos Aires. And by watching, I mean this... local people who listen to local stations and go to local shows and local clubs... take a look at it

There will always be niche markets, where people who are looking for specialized products will drive farther and spend more money. But that kind of store is the equivalent of narrowcasting... and for that, we have today iPods and the web and all kinds of other distribution models.

There is no difference in whether an independent can get a song played today than in the past. In fact, with so many more formats than there were in the 50's and 60's, the number of new songs played per week in a market is many times more than it was when you had multiple top 40, multiple MOR and a couple of r&b or countrry stations.

And if the guy at the Mercedes plant near Tuscaloosa puts a green fender on a gray car, he gets a warning, and then fired. Why would we not exepect our product to be as finely crafted as any other? Like I said, the stations you mentioned in the Twin Cities would not allow deviation from the playlist... and a jock that did so would be warned, and then fired.

No, and that is not true today, either. The largest owns about 800 stations, with a significnt number in a trust pending their sale. The next largest has about half that, and by the time you get to the 6th largest, they have around 75 stations. And, to put things in perspective, the average McDonalds grosses about twice what the average US radio station did 2 years ago. Now, it's probably 3 to 1 in favor of the Mickey D place.

Infomericals are what stations that can't compete do... or they sell brokered hours... or run religious shows that are paid based on donations... or they rent the station to someone who does a format in Hindi or Russian or Farsi.

Those stations, mainly AM, can't compete because 90% of major market AM stations do not cover the market fully day and night, so they can't challenge the bigger stations, and they do whatever it takes to bring in revenue. Of about 1800 AMs in the top 100 markets, about 210 are viable. The rest can run the stuff that pays the bills and leaves a little on the side.

And if you don't think Allan is a millionaire, think again. He owns of all things, TWO ROLLS ROYCES including one in mint condition that is 90 years old. I guess that leaves WBCQ with maybe one legitmate broadcaster (Area 51). I guess it doesn't matter, WBCQ comes in like garbage on anything but 7415.

From wbcq.com

Dear JL:

Have neither you nor Steve ever ever learned in life that when you continually insult anyone, they'll eventually react–and not in a nice way?

Your insipid and demeaning comments about WBCQ, its management, employees, and its programmers—every time you were on the air, at our expense—just got to be too much.

Countless times we tried calling you, left messages, and not once in at least a year could you be bothered to return a single call. That's what happened to your "forewarning."

We don't pretend to be anything more than we are—a shortwave station in a nowhere town in a nowhere state with little profit from a few loyal programmers and a couple of employees who do the best they can under the circumstances.

We don't pretend to be sophisticated, don't pretend to have all the latest equipment, don't pretend to be anything at all. We basically just do what we do for the love of radio.

We work hard—very hard. We have to, in order to make shows like yours possible. It's no reward to hear you and Steve on your regular WBCQ-bashes of totally gratuitous venom. It's not funny; it's not even vaguely amusing.

There was a time when all that stuff was funny. That was when it was, as you so often say, "shtick." But that was in the past.

Recently you've both taken it much further. You've taken it to a point where it's obvious—not only to us but to many of our listeners—that it's not "shtick" but just plain nastiness. We get e-mails and phone calls from people who hear that and say, "Why do you put up with that?" We got to the point where we had to say, "That's a damned good question."

You don't offend us, but you do offend our employees and listeners. I sure as hell don't like paying for that out of my own pocket.

Now if either you, Steve, or any of your listeners still dobn't understand, all you have to do is listen to any of your recent programs. Quod erat demonstrandum.

Bottom line: You kicked us once too much, and we finally kicked back. (Oh yeah—and that's the beauty of having 'owner' next to your name.)

I was just informed that 11L/RNI programming has been cancelled on WBCQ. This was literally told to Big Steve Cole when he called in to hook up to the station for audio. I have no inkling as to why.

Big Steve tried to contact Allan Weiner who I am told was angry over something said in a recent program that I can only assume was so toxic a statement that he has decided to pull the plug.

As I have not been on the air for weeks, and have always ribbed my 'ol pally more than a little without any problems , I know I've done nothing to annoy the man most responsible for our longevity, and cannot fathom what may have lead to his decision.

Know that I received no advanced word that we were gone, but it seems we are. I have not spoken to Allan in quite some time, and choose not to bother him now. Whatever the reason, I cannot say; however I can only thank him for having extended himself and his facilities to us as long as he has.

I am certainly not pleased, but hardly can be angry as I assume the rationale for this move will be made know to me at some point.

I'd advise you to contact the station directly if you choose, perhaps you can glean some info I am not privy to.

As of 10:47 Sunday evening, all I know is we are persona non grata at Planet Radio. In a period of weeks during which I have been on an emotional rollercoaster as the people who were to sell me my dream house did the proverbial last minute pull out, my search for a new home goes on while my buyers dicker around, yes, this news is oh so timely.

But my ulcer has had enough of a workout of late, I will waste no time fretting over this loss. I have given my best radio to WBCQ and I think we have provided them with some of their best programming. I can leave knowing that.

Nonetheless It was a good run. As to our internet future, we shall decide to what extent we have one in the days and weeks to come.

Wow, Neil Rogers got axed last week, now yours truly. Radio really does offer less every day (although at least he got a 'buy out' to just go away… I should be so lucky some day!)

Check back for updates as I have them and thanks for your support for over 10 wild years.

My E Mail to Allan Weiner was answered with an open letter to yours truly, which caN be read using the link below. it seemingly explains why 11L/RNI will no longer be heard on Planet Radio.
http://www.wbcq.com/
Well it seems my standard shtick has gone unappreciated by some WBCQ listeners. At least what has long been my ‘act’ did not sit well with many, so we have been dismissed.
I guess I am as clueless as many of you believe me to be, and you may be right.
Nonetheless, I am so clueless I am uncertain just what comments offended WBCQ listeners and staff, among others.
Then again, I had a bad habit of offending other broadcasters back in my Pirate day, and was wholly unaware that what I thought was funny, was anything but. I guess in 20 years down the line, I learned little about where to draw the line even though I thought I had.
Yeah, I feel misunderstood, but obviously contributed to anger and animus while not intending to. That is no excuse, just the truth.
So if that is the case, I plead guilty and will leave it at that. As I have stated to many listeners, go to the archives and listen to any shows. If there is any malice to be heard in my comments, I cannot find it.
As for the Big Guy who also gets blame, I cannot speak for him, but I don’t think we have ever engaged in ‘gratuitous venom’. But then again, the opinion of some is unlikely to be mine.
As I’ve apparently offended many, it matters not at all if it was unintentional. But the charges that I have been nasty is pure BS. I strongly disagree with those assertions.
Since the fire, I’ve done precious few shows on WBCQ and they have hardly been nasty or venomous to the very people who enabled us. Well, we just disagree and go on our way duly chastised. Another lesson learned, and for that I probably owe my former enables thanks.
But I contend that the line between shtick and nasty has not been crossed by me. My act is longstanding, but ‘biting the hand that feeds me’ has never been my intent. Obviously I about chewed it off.
Just know it was never the intent of this broadcaster to be nasty, and I do not believe that was the case. Nevertheless as you feel that is the case, you did what was right by you, your staff and listeners. My apologies are real if belated. As we both are oceans apart on the charges that I’ve been nasty, I accept blame regardless.
It seems too many people disagree with me, but I hope those that do will let me know so on or off the air.
WBCQ enabled us and for that my gratitude is real. Yes, that may mean nothing to the staff and management in the end, but that is the fact. You carried us for a long time and what I thought was programming good for the station, proved to be anything but. I am sorry that was the case. I wish you nothing but the best regardless.
However I insist the allegations that recently we have taken our ‘nastyness’ much further is not based in fact. OOFAH! But hey, we just disagree.

Recluse that I am, I was indeed out of touch with my enablers. My fault and my mistake. Imperfect asshole that I am, I was hardly the perfect guest. I just gave my best radio. That other listeners to the station felt what I did was nasty, indicates a lack of knowledge of what I do, or an inability to get my act. So be it.
As many of you know, I have been considering quitting this broadcasting grind for some time. Perhaps that time is in the future, but not quite yet. We shall do the occasional Internet show, including one this weekend.
But it is obviously time to look back and reflect. I am not one to go back and listen to old shows, that is a big waste of time. But I take Allan and Company at their word, I obviously upset people so despite my not believing I did, and certainly did not intend to, I shall redouble my efforts to not do the same to others in the future.
Although I have no desire to do a show all about this Sunday (and will not), I'd appreciate calls or E Mail from anyone citing just what actual nastyness, not shtick I engaged in. You may beat me about the head if you wish, that is fine.
MY broadcast code has always strived to be like that of Doctors, basically 'Do no harm'. However it seems, regardless of my intent I have. Although I disagree, I obviously inflicted pain to some, accept blame for such and wherever in the future I lay claim to an open mic, will take the lesson of my time at WBCQ with me.
I ask you please not annoy WBCQ staff if you disagree with their decision. We will not be coming back and have no wish to. Considering the fact that we were so misunderstood, while I felt I was providing programming I could take pride in, I now feel as if I picked Allan's pocket. That is not a good feeling at all, but all I can do is strive to become a better person that it seems I am.
There are no 'good' guys or 'bad' guys here. Frankly I feel barely sad at all about our seemingly self inflicted demise, as compared to how I feel about being the source of agita for those people who were responsible for my radio career.
We too Allan, broadcast out of the love we have for doing so. Both you and I spend money we don't have to offer an alternative views and our unique vision of radio. Thank you one last time for spending yours to enable mine. Overall I think I delivered the goods, and can move on knowing that. And while I ponder what other possible peripheral rationale lead to our axing, I leave without bitterness or anger and truly do hope your ongoing venture continues to thrive.
John L.
P.S.

As it would be more than slightly incongruous to use our old E Mail address (WBCQRADIO), while it shall remain active for some time, please address all future E Mail to our new address:

JOHNPLIGHTNING@AOL.COM

It has come to my short attention span that many of you are confused by my last post about our broadcasting future. Well, you are no more so than I, but WE WILL BE LIVE AT JOHNLIGHTNING.COM this Sunday at 8PM, with the usual pre game fill at 7:30. It promises to be interesting.

11L/RNI continues worldwide on the worldwide web. For all fans of RNI, accept no substitutes and join us this week. This web site will keep you apprised of our programming schedule. Those on our mailing list will get E Mail alerts whenever 11L/RNI will be broadcasting on the web.

If you wish to get such alerts, let us know with an E Mail to:

JOHNPLIGHTNING@AOL.COM

Many thanks to all for your support of our efforts. ☺

And here is today's RNI update…NOTHING.

Yes, I am still wholly without a logical, rational explanation as to why our program was excised from WBCQ. Indeed, I am beginning to suspect the one offered to Big Steve is just laboratory grade, government spec, pure BS. I do not know if some errant comment, a lack of JL programming, financial considerations, or other nebulous and perhaps never to be revealed reasons were behind our sudden demise on shortwave. And with each passing day, I care less what lead to our being deep sixed.

I have tried to contact WBCQ management by E Mail and have yet to receive a response. This is troubling, but so be it. Understand my friends, that I have NO DESIRE to return to WBCQ, it is a done deal. I gave my best radio to them in exchange for lots of gratis air time. We are even.

Regardless, I thank not condemn WBCQ management for allowing me to broadcast at their expense for 10 years. I owe my broadcasting career as it were, to promise keeper Allan Weiner, so my disappointment in the ignoble manner in which we were dismissed is tempered by his loyalty to yours truly for all that time.

We shall be 'on the air' so to speak, here at JohnLightning.Com this Sunday with a show that will briefly only, discuss our pink slipping. Unless I receive some clarification there will be little more to add. Station management is infamous for sugarcoating or otherwise being less than frank about certain decisions. Too bad, I would not be angry or recoil at the truth behind our exit, but I doubt I will ever get the truth from an old friend who has so far, come up truth challenged.

Nonetheless, my thanks for our long run is heartfelt and sincere. It is just a shame the plug was pulled in a manner that I am certain neither 11L/RNI staffers or myself were deserving of.

That said, spread the word about there being something worth listening to on Sunday nights to a friend or 20, and perhaps we shall remain Live on Sundays, although a streaming and downloadable pod cast may be the final result of post Move RNI.

Once again, thanks and this time to all the fine programmers, friends one and all, who have been there for me during the post fire period of our broadcasting. Know that you are one and all, welcomed to continue to be a part of any future 11L/RNI may have, if you so desire. I hope to hear from just about all of you (meaning probably two of you) this Sunday. Be civil to all and be well.

There's no doubt that Telemundoh! would be fascinating from a case study perspective. Just tell your ex to feel great sympathy for him and that should take care of the tendency to laugh.

Who knows why and how the kooktards came up with the guillotine aspect?
It makes for a good sounding drama but nothing more. If only the kooktards put their imaginations to better use than conspiracy theories...

Lol! So April Fools Day it is. So who to get to do the emcee work? Jerry Lewis can be crazy but 2 telethons in a year would kill the old boy. I'd be tempted to have Kathy Griffin. Jeez, she tear the kooktards many new ones!

Thanks very much, John! This gives me a glimmer of hope as it sounds like we live in similar climates (semi-arid, in my case) though I am quite aways farther from a coastline.

He may have a syndrome named after him, like Telemon's syndrome, or maybe Telemon's birthtardic disease.

That would be so great.

The Guillotine thing is a bible thumper thing. I don't know where they came up with it, since it wasn't invented until the 1300's. There used to be a movie they showed on the local holy roller station where the evil govmint was making people choose "The mark" (Barcode) or getting chopped. The acting was insanely bad, and the ending is comical. There's a little kid who chooses the chopper, and is happy to get it. I thought it was one of the more comical flicks I've ever seen.

Bullshit. Los Angeles doesn't even have one Active Rock station. Is

In fact, China alone is now the world’s leading emitter of greenhouse gases and its economy will surpass the United States’ by mid-century if not sooner.

Radio audience is a group. To form a group, you have to attract listeners with common likes and dislikes, and satisfy each of them.

Pass US by mid-century? I guess that's not bad for ten times as many people.

Here's the thing. Unless it gets greenhouse gases under control it won't need to worry about passing US economically. Maybe it can go Soylent Green. (While it's a cheezy movie that postulates machines can't run at relatively low tempratures for machines but high for humans, economics will drive up the cost of the fuel to pump out those greenhouse gases. Unless China is as stupid as we are and subsidizes fuels that produce greenhouse gasses it will substitute cheaper alterenatives as they come on line.)

America has already seen a shift in our population to warmer climate "races". Does China have the necessary mix for population substitution based upon climate change?

No, Radio listening is done by individuals. It's done by individuals, mostly in separate locations, under separate conditions, with individual intent, tastes and needs of the moment. Radio listening is an individual experience. Not a group marketing construct.

As R. L. Larkin liked to say..."The Map is not the Territory." There are vast differences between the individuals needs and individual experience, and the constructs used to measure, evaluate, and attempt to grasp these experiences, and then direct mass listening.

"Radio audience" is an artificial construct to group individuals into a single manageable entity, by averaging, rounding off, and statistically creating a model from carefully chosen sample. To create the 'average' listener to whom the product is marketed, and for whom the advertising is targeted. But it is not the actual individual listener. Who often selects a radio station because it's the lesser of multiple dislikes.

Radio audience is not like a theatre audience. A theatre audience is a group of individuals gathered at a common time, into a single place, with a single intent, and a single environment, with common expectations on product that are driven by the common environment the common experience. An audience shares contained commonality. Even to changing dress for the experience.

Radio is individual. It's been a long time since people grouped around their radios for the common experience. Radio listening, today, is 'at will.' Seeking psychographic satisfaction at the moment as an individual. Usually singly, usually personally. With expectations of the product that are driven by the needs/wants/tastes/satisfactions of the moment.

But Radio is presented by a carefully constructed formula based on a carefully constructed model of the listeners that comprise the construct called audience. And listeners choose what's available. Even if it may not be to their precise tastes/needs/wants of the moment. Radio works to convince listeners that what Radio presents is precisely what the listener wants.

So Radio doesn't attract bodies of listeners by satisfying each of them. They attract individual listeners by doing what's easy, convenient and graspable for RADIO, and satisfying the needs of the artificial construct, not the individual. And then selling the individual on the idea that he/she/it is actually being satisfied as an individual.

And it's all nonsense.

If Radio was so successful at satisfying the needs of each of it's listeners, there would be many fewer alternative choices to Radio. Because there would be no viable market for them.

Radio does what's good for Radio.

The fact that Radio is successful at meeting Radio's goal is not an indication that Radio has satisfied each listener's needs. It's only an indication that Radio has met the goals of its marketing construct. And satisfied the construct of the 'average' listener, with average content, presented in an average way, until the numbers match the target.

Actual listeners are only tools to Radio's commercial end.

Listeners are not served by Radio. Radio lures listeners so that listeners may serve Radio's needs.

No disagreement. But from the persective of a radio staiton, one can only form an audience, which is a group, by finding common appeal among many, many individuals. The process consists in finding the common thread among large groups of listeners, and providing it. The listener wo thinks, "I like this music" or "I like this show" must be joined by thousands if not tens of thousands of other people all at once for a station to be successful.

The first step has to be that identification of broad likes. Then, the content is delivered as if it were directed at each listener individually. That is where one on one comes in... in the delivery, not the design.

In airchecking, I often suggest that jocks put a picture of a loved one or family menber over the mike so they talk to a person, not a crowd. But, again, this only works if the program content is selected to appeal to a bunch of listeners, a group.

Reread my statement... "Radio Audience is a Group." Each listener is an individual, but the audience is a group.

A good resstaurant may have a few customers who like beets. But maybe 80% of the customers hate them. So they would never serve beets as a standard side. That's because they know most of the clients would not enjoy their dining experience as much as were they to serve potatoes and mixed veggies. The restaurant knows the base offerings must have broad appeal to a group of clients. Otherwise, they fail.

The rest of your post was clipped, as you are harping on the idea that we as an industry don't get that listening happens person by person. We get that, but a station has to appeal to each person who belongs to a group with common music likes and dislikes and which is large enough to make the station successful (by whatever metric that is measured). And that is where the concept of a group, a collection, an assembly enters in. The key part of "broadcasting" today is "broad."

I read it the first time, David. Or I wouldn't have had a response.

The 'audience' doesn't exist. It's an artificial construct to gather together the numbers into a manageable device. But it's an artificial construct, nothing more.

Every restaurant I frequent will serve an alternate, if I ask.
They understand that general offerings don't get it, even for patrons who seek out their restaurant based on genre.

Interesting you should mention beets. I get beets frequently.

I"m sure that you get that listening happens person by person.
The fact you clipped the rest and reduced it to 'harping' underscores my point that Radio isn't about the listeners. It's about Radio. And for the bigger groups, the stock price.

The listeners are only a tool to a commercial end. Your job is to sell us on the idea that we want what you offer.

Radio does what's good for Radio.

The listeners serve that end.

Sorry Cuhulin (about the talk radio), I hope you are right, if not for anything else, just for the freedom of speech thing. But I do know someone that has been in the sales/marketing (don't know which one for sure) dept.
at WLW for at least 13-14 yrs. and many are definitely concerned (according to him) from the rumblings of management.

Hopefully, there is nothing behind it in the future.

In response to Billy Mays, that was a great tribute show IMO (Thurs. night). I had/have noticed that some of his infomercials are still playing and there was an actual article about it on my home page that explained it somewhat. I wrote about a part of that article and what it said in my calendar.

It said on July 20th (which is a Monday) that posthumously they are going to release to all the cable stations, an infomercial about a product that Billy pitched. If I remember right, it is something along the line of the "Mighty Mend-It."

That show on Billy was something else IMO, he said all the work he had done over the years and struggling, that financially his life basically started when he was fourty one years old. Great show, hopefully Sully can pull it together and keep it going.

You cannot interview them in groups. People express their likes and

No, our job is to identify what individual listeners want, and then find the commonality that has a base in a large group of people with similar likes. Then we serve each individual. Unlike the internet, or the restaurant example, we can't customize content for each listener, but we can find common elements many listeners have... which ends up being the same thing.

Audience is the only thing radio sells. Audience is created by putting together, one by one, listeners who like a station and come to it with a certain frequency.

"Selling what we want you to offer..." is an old concept. It's, from the radio point of view, about "us." It's the "50,000 watt voice of the Great Southwest." Who cares? Good radio today is about "you," the individual listener. It's the difference between "La Nueva, the concert station, where you can win tickets to the Vicente Fernandez concert..." and "Imagine yourself in the front row at the Vicente Fernandez concert... it may not be a dream...."

That's why most radio research today is done individually. And a music test is not a discussion, so whether there is one person or one hundred present, each person scores each song individually, and many stations have moved to on-line testing (one person) or "by invitation" individual testing in an office or even mall meeting room. Perceptuals are most often done by one on one phone interviews or one on one personal interviews. Callout music research is done via one on one phone interviews.

LOL, I thought you were posting to John Barnard, ooops.

I'm not a huge Obama fan, but we have to give him time to reverse the mess he was left with before we give him a final score, right? Even a rightwing moron waits until the game is over before declaring a winner, right?

> individual listener.

This is simply not true. Reinforced by your statement of above:

"we can't customize content for each listener"

And "our job is to identify what individual listeners want"

False on its face. Your job is to make money. Radio has been ever thus.

Listeners are a tool to that end.

But research says we like these songs, doesn't it. So, choice, and variety is not an option.

"the commonality that has a base in a large group of people with similar likes. Then we serve each individual. "

Congratulations. You've finally contradicted yourself within the same sentence.

It's a simple contradiction in terms. You cannot serve the individual by reducing the individual to commonality.

Radio is not about the listener, Radio is about Radio and what Radio needs. Consider, to put this back on topic for the newsgroup, Mark Byfords decision to kill BBC SW transmissions to North America. He sold the concept by the numbers. Claiming that BBC was more listened to on local FM than on Shortwave. Precisely arrived at, but hardly accurate. The million + listeners to BBC WS on Shortwave listened to programs that were not on local FM. And in all but a handful of markets, the entire BBC content was no more than a 5 minute news summary once an hour a few hours overnight. Where you, yourself, have argued there is no meaningful listening.

Byford sold this and sold it hard. Whole programs were devoted to it. Opposing positions were not permitted and challenging questions were deflected or ignored. In the end, SW was killed, and the savings went into Byford's pocket, and the pockets of a few other executives. Facts released by BBC, itself.

Radio did what was right for radio. The listeners weren't even a part of the process.

What you are saying here is the same thing. Radio does what it needs to do for Radio. The listeners are just a tool.

And in the era of mass customization, yours is a very outdated mode of thinking.

Which is why Radio is becoming more irrelevant every day.

Every day I encounter who are no longer listening to radio. I've encountered an alarming number of people who own no radios. And have been stunned by the number under 25 who have never owned a radio. Why? Because Radio has never met their needs. Other services have.

You position is not surprising. You're employed by an industry that pays you well, affords you comfort, recognition, and position of responsibility. But your position is about Radio. Not the listeners. Your own descriptions of process underscore that listeners are merely a tool to Radio's end. Which is making money.

It's never been different.

But it's going to be.

we had 2 top 40 stations back then, including the one where i got to pick my own top 40. we listened to other stations because there was a wide selection and variety available to people back then. properly its not that the castaways pushed off the beatles and stones music off the air, its that we had a choice, and that choice enriched the music listening, and also the health of the music industry. the music industry uses your research, and we see how well they are doing.

With the choices available, he was the best one by far. Just to keep Palin out of the on deck circle. McCain picking Palin was a huge mistake, a fatal one. I'm not the only one that thinks that way, BTW.

Since I've been able to vote, I voted for Ford, Reagan, Reagan, Bush, Clinton, Clinton, Bush (I'm so ashamed), Kerry (Not much choice there either, I held my nose), and Obama (not the stinker Kerry was, but still the easy choice). I wasn't about to Vote for Nader.

You aren't a birthtard are you?

How Clear Channel destroyed its own radio market

By Paul Waldman

July 12, 2009

A year ago, Atlantic Monthly writer Virginia Postrel, in an article entitled "In Praise of Chain Stores," argued that the homogenization of our commercial landscapes is on balance a good thing. Mom & Pop's Hardware may be charming, Postrel contended, but with the exception of Mom and Pop themselves, most of us will be better off if there's a Home Depot in town.

But what about the homogenization of our cultural and informational landscape? That, it turns out, is a different story, a part of which Alec Foege attempts to tell in Right of the Dial: The Rise of Clear Channel and the Fall of Commercial Radio. Though today Clear Channel has fallen from the heights it reached just a few years ago, if you have any opinion about the company at all it is probably not a good one. As it ballooned in size to become the dominant player in the radio industry, Clear Channel came to symbolize for many people everything that's wrong with media today: a rapacious corporation, unleashed by its Republican friends to pillage its way across the American landscape, leaving in its wake hundreds of formerly unique and public-minded outlets, which were suddenly sucked into the corporate maw and spit back on a powerless public, delivering the same soulless excuse for news and culture to every community unlucky enough to suffer under its pitiless rule. Or so the story goes.

Clear Channel began in 1972 when its founder, L. Lowry Mays, cosigned a loan for some associates who wanted to buy an FM radio station in San Antonio. When they ran into financial difficulties, Mays found himself the owner of the station. When Mays and a group of investors bought an AM station three years later, Clear Channel Communications was formed. They chose the name because the AM station had a "clear channel," the term used to denote those stations that had exclusive use of their frequencies during nighttime hours, enabling them to broadcast to most or all of the nation (unlike FM signals, AM signals can travel hundreds or even thousands of miles, depending on the topography and weather conditions).

As it slowly expanded through the 1970s and into the '80s, Clear Channel did something unusual: it ran radio stations like businesses. At the time, the typical station was a poorly managed, family-owned operation whose owners may have had little idea if they were making or losing money. Though its penny-pinching earned it the nickname "Cheap Channel," the company made excellent profits. In 1984, Clear Channel went public, and by the end of the year it owned twelve radio stations—close to the ownership limits of seven FM and seven AM stations the FCC imposed at the time.

The corporation expanded its businesses, buying television stations and, in 1997, a billboard company (or "outdoor advertising"), becoming the dominant player in that sector as well. But what truly transformed Clear Channel was a piece of legislation that passed in 1996. Mays understood that in order to vertically integrate his business and squeeze major savings from economies of scale, Clear Channel had to be big—and the bigger, the better.

It was the Telecommunications Act of 1996 that enabled Clear Channel to become a behemoth. Seldom in the annals of American history has a piece of legislation with such wide-reaching consequences passed with such little public notice, in no small part because the media companies that might have reported on it critically had an interest in not doing so. Newspapers, television, and radio (not to mention the phone companies) all were affected dramatically by the legislation, and all in ways that allowed the largest corporations to grow larger. But none were affected as much as radio, where the ownership caps that had prevented any one company from achieving a dominant position were not just lifted but removed altogether. (There are still some limits on how many stations a company can own in one market, but there is no national limit, as there was before.) Instantly, Clear Channel began buying up stations as fast as it could.

And they were not alone. Literally within hours of the act's passage, the radio industry was overtaken by a feeding frenzy of acquisitions, as upstart corporations moved to gobble up as many stations as they could. According to a lengthy report published in 2006 by the Future of Music Coalition, in 1995 Clear Channel owned thirty-nine radio stations, more than any other corporation in America. Five years later, they owned 1,100. They would eventually own more than 1,200 radio stations, around six times as many as their closest competitor. Clear Channel gobbled up a series of other radio companies, a spree that culminated in its purchase of AMFM, a company owning more than four hundred stations. At $23.5 billion, it was the biggest deal in the history of the radio industry.

Clear Channel's enormous size was enough to make people who care about media diversity nervous. But it was two other factors—the particular manner in which they cut costs and boosted profits, and their conservative political leanings—that gained them a reputation for corporate villainy.

Clear Channel, Foege writes, eradicated radio's localism, making it more formatted and formulaic, less personalized and more national. The world's biggest radio company deconstructed a medium that prided itself on its intimate connection with its listeners and made it as uniformly bland and anonymous as anyone could bear.

The way they did it was with a now-infamous system known as "voice tracking." Instead of having deejays drawing salaries at individual stations, radio companies realized they could take one deejay, have him spin tunes and deliver patter from corporate headquarters, and feed his signal to as many stations as they wanted. They could even have him record brief bits with local references for each station and integrate them into the program feed, and thereby give the illusion that the program being aired in Minneapolis or Sacramento actually involved a deejay sitting in Minneapolis or Sacramento. Clear Channel didn't invent voice tracking, but they spread it farther and wider than anyone had before.

This practice may make perfect economic sense, but it also reveals at best an indifference, and at worst a contempt, toward the role of radio as a cultural arbiter, the place where people can go to hear new or locally produced music and find the touchstones of their generation.

Foege begins his preface with a story of driving through New England listening to a Clear Channel station, when "for the fourth time in four states, I've unwittingly tuned in to 'Kashmir,'" by Led Zeppelin. Foege may have grown tired of "Kashmir" long before the rise of Clear Channel, but the company, as Foege relates, managed during that time to whittle "a familiar play list of thirty- to forty-year-old rock songs into what sometimes [felt] like the same hour-and-a-half mix played over and over ad infinitum"—and "Kashmir" was in that mix. Because Clear Channel was so dominant in the radio marketplace, everyone was listening to the same music all the time.

Clear Channel's attitude is best summed up by what the head of their television unit would tell the studios that owned syndicated programs. "Programming," Foege quotes him as saying, "is the shit we run between the commercials." The product that media companies like Clear Channel sell isn't the programming; the product they sell is audiences, and advertisers are their customers.

Despite its title (which may or may not, of course, have been Foege's choice), Right of the Dial doesn't spend a great deal of time on the political implications of Clear Channel's rise, or even fully answer the question of just how political the company really is. Was the company's Iraq War boosterism (with pro-war rallies organized by multiple Clear Channel stations), or the fact that a list of banned songs (including John Lennon's "Imagine") was circulated within the company after September 11, 2001, a true expression of a corporate ideology, or merely an attempt to capitalize on the sentiment of the moment? What about the reports of deejays being fired for expressing opposition to the Iraq War, and the company's refusal to place some antiwar ads on its billboards?

These are important and interesting questions, but for the most part the book leaves them unresolved. Foege is more straightforward when relating the kind of hardball tactics—or, as more than a few claimed, predatory and monopolistic behaviors—Clear Channel engaged in while building its business in concert venues. Utilizing their expanding venue holdings and their radio stations as double cudgels, they all but forced bands to book concerts only at Clear Channel sites for fear of being shut out of future concerts and airtime on influential stations. It has used its other holdings in similar ways. For instance, Clear Channel owns Premier Radio Networks, which syndicates some of the country's biggest radio hosts, including Rush Limbaugh and Dr. Laura. In 2001, Premier informed many of its clients that it was pulling shows from their stations and transferring them to Clear Channel-owned stations in the same market, leaving them holding the bag for the efforts they had invested to promote those personalities.

Then there's the question of how Clear Channel treats its own. While Foege interviewed many of the key upper-management players in the company's relatively brief history, other reporters—notably Eric Boehlert in a series of pieces for Salon in 2001—have gotten rank-and-file Clear Channel employees (many anonymously) to talk candidly about the company. The portrait they paint is of an absolutely sinister organization awash in sexual harassment, threats, and intimidation of both competitors and employees. The topic of the company's internal culture could have used further exploration in this book.

In the epilogue, Foege describes Clear Channel as "Colonel Parker without his Presley," good businessmen who built a behemoth on a base of fiscal prudence combined with innovative tactics and extraordinary aggressiveness when circumstances allowed. But they never cared about the culture they were using to sell audiences to advertisers, and that indifference ultimately played a large part in their undoing. Commercial radio audiences have been steadily decreasing, a decline abetted by the rise of satellite radio and, of course, the Internet, which provides people ways to learn about and acquire (legally or otherwise) the music they previously would have discovered on their local radio stations. The Internet, for example, allows people to download a podcast of the influential KCRW Santa Monica music show Morning Becomes Eclectic anywhere in the world, which somewhat obviates the need to have a version of Morning Becomes Eclectic broadcast on your local radio station. This development made the situation for local stations bad enough. But the way Clear Channel treated its listeners—like simpletons who wouldn't mind hearing the same ten songs over and over—made things worse.

There is little doubt that Clear Channel's model of content delivery has contributed to the decline of commercial radio. At a time when—usually, if not always, for the better—technology is diminishing the power and authority of cultural gatekeepers, Clear Channel's homogenized, narrowed slate of offerings becomes less and less appealing. So it shouldn't come as too much of a shock to learn that the terrifying corporate monster is less imposing than it was just a few years ago.

In response to declining profits and listener disgust, the company announced in 2004 that it was cutting back on the number of commercials it broadcast. In 2006, it unveiled Format Lab, a sort of radio think tank, to devise original formats with greater variety and more room for local improvisation. Finally, this January, the FCC approved the sale of Clear Channel to two private equity firms for $20 billion, which took the company private. Alongside the deal, Clear Channel announced it would sell all of its television stations and more than four hundred of its radio stations in smaller markets. Its stock, which neared $100 per share in 2000, has dipped below $30 this year. The company won't be going out of business anytime soon, but with its own missteps—and the possibility of a regulatory environment much less friendly to unlimited media consolidation in the near future—Clear Channel's days of world domination may be over.

In her area, there was no local Fm, but the ones nearby took all the audience of the AM, which was power-challenged, and the AM turned in its Relatively few AMs moved their programming to FM. When the simulcast ban in metro markets went into effect in 1967, stations that had an FM put different programming on the FM. Later, many realized the FM was going to make more money than the AM... so they kept the formats.

I went through a list of major markets... just a sample of the top 25, and I can't think of more than a couple of cases in the 10 years after the simulcast ruling where an AM format moved to a co-owned FM. The Top 40 stations that were big on AM got beaten by challengers on FM... like WMYQ (FM)and WHYI (FM)in Miami, and AMs WQAM and WFUN, owned by others, eventually both changed formats. That happened in markets from Birmingham to Phonnix. In a couple of cases, staitons that got waivers, like KUPD Tempe, AZ, fired up a bigger transmitter on the FM and the FM became the dominant part... but there was no mass migration anywhere to FM by existing formats... because the AM owners were too late in reacting and someone had already claim jumped the format on FM.

beaten and crused by FMs. Listeners did not want the limited signals, the night directional nulls and the low-fi quality combined with man made noise, so music went to FM. Those big AMs did not give up easily... they simply lost as more and more audience went to FM as the formats people wanted appeared there.

I was in a top 15 market when the most attractive format suddenly appeared for the first time on FM. The total share of about 15 FMs had been around 15 share points before that. In 6 months, the total FM share was over 50, and that one station reached levels of 33.5 share in one book. People immediately moved to FM when the format they wanted appeared there.

Actually, most of what is on iPods, per several studies, is exactly the kind of music that is on the radio, or has been on the radio. The interest in offbeat songs is restricted to a small group of people, and the main reason to have an ipod is to play only the songs you like, which is often less than the playlists of the three or four radio stations the average person listens to weekly.

Research like that is not corporate. It is simply finding a group of people who like the general kind of music your staiton plays, and asking them to score each song that has been played or is being played.

What has been going on on the internet in the last few weeks is the downloading of millions of Michael Jackson songs that were hits on the radio.

And I suppose you have never had the experience of going to see a favorite singer or group, only to have them play a bunch of new songs from the new CD, and then performing a perfunctory medley of your favorite hits by that performer. Didn't the audience complain, moan or boo? They came to hear hits, not unknown songs. A lot of people don't get that.

Nobody said that. I said that the Beatles song would likely be considered first for play, and then if there was room for another add that week, the Castaways might get played. Same then as now, just different artists.

<its that we had a choice, and that choice enriched the <music listening, and also the health of the music industry. the music

Oh, how little you know. How truly, truly little. The music industry hates radio research, because it gives fast feedback and often causes a new song the label is pushing to be pulled in 2 or 3 weeks because it stiffed.... the record business does not "use" radio's research because the research is proprietary and confidential and part of each station's competitive edge. It is certainly not shared with the record ducks.

Again, the music industry hates radio's research, and some record executives even blame radio research for all of the music industry's problems. They are as clueless as you are.

Because there are lots of good stations in each market, and the average listener uses 4 or 5 of them regularly. We use prizing as an incentive to those interested in such things to keep them tuned to us and not another station they like.

I don't know. Maybe. Did she promise NOT to? That was kind of my point, since Clinton LIED, saying specifically that he would NOT do that to win the election, then went ahead and did it anyway.

Sorry, I thought that was clear to the simplest slackjawed yokel, but I didn't know YOU would be reading it.

Of course, Obama said in 2004 that he was NOT running for president in 2008 because he had just taken office and wouldn't know what he was doing if he won the presidency.

So you can't say he didn't warn you, but I fail to get why you now hold this against Palin.

I guess it depends on what plans she has in the immediate future. You don't everything not Liberal is once again based on nothing but your hatred of everything not Liberal.

Yes, that whole ">>" thing is a complicated code to crack.

Hmmm, let's see. We were talking about Sarah Palin leaving the office of governor early and how that disqualified her for the presidency, and I asked why Clinton didn't suffer the same condemnation when he promised not to leave early, so your logical progression to the discussion is: "Shouldn't we give Obama more time to fix things?"??

Okay, I'll play along.

I was willing to wait. OBAMA was the one who called for a final vote when he said the stimulus worked.

> Even a rightwing moron waits until the game is over before declaring a winner,

I wouldn't know what a rightwing moron does or thinks, but do you recall when the "worst presidency in history" accusations first started during the Bush administration? I'm remembering the great patience the Left had while calling the 'surge' a failure before it had even started. Same for the invasion of Baghdad. Come to think, the tax cuts didn't exactly get a full count either.

I'll be honest, the point in posting all the sentences was so it was archived in it's entire text. No doubt one of them will remove the statements, but google usenet lives forever. Well at least for a few more months.

Only time WBCQ is even listenable is when Brother Star is on the air. 5110 is useless and I have no idea why Area 51 pays to be on it when no one is listening. WWRB, WWCR, and the Cuban station on 5025 have no trouble with their signals in that range.

WBCQ would be smart to transmit out of Aguilla.

Of course, you didn't hear Farrakan call him that, you only heard the 'right wingers' repeat it, but didn't hear WHO they were repeating.

I believe 'messiah' means 'chosen one' and I'm sure you never heard Oprah call him that with adoration in her eyes? Didn't think so.

Perhaps it was Bush's eight year crucifixion that made people think messiah when Obama appeared immediately after?

You're not the only one, but calling it 'thinking' is a stretch. It was a kneejerk reaction to whoever he might have chosen. She was a wrong choice immediately, and it was only a matter of assembling the negative list of reasons once they had a name to work with. The first article I saw about her - the day her name came out - said that her hairdo was 20 years out of date! I guess they had to work fast.

Isn't it just possible (and mind you, I think that Clinton should be serving prison time over the Monica thing) that MAYBE there's a LITTLE bit of difference between lying and changing one's mind?

Lying is when he said "I did not have sex with that woman, Monica Lewinski."

I would have to read the original text, but somehow I doubt that the word "promise" entered into the statement. Even if it did, and he later found he had a good chance to obtain higher office, and thus changed his mind, it still would not be a lie. A lie is a purposeful untruth..

Of cuorse there is. WHen Clinton does it, it's a lie. ;^D

I mnean seriously, in retrospect, when William Clinton said "I promise to serve my full term even if offered the presidency" should anyone have believed for one second that he meant it?

I'm sure he promised to serve with the same conviction in his face.

The "purpose" was to get re-elected governor, giving him greater credibility for the presidential election.

Oh, you missed the part where I mentioned that "rock" is a different format (actually a collection of formats") from Top 40.

Top 40 (or CHR, it's name since the 70's) is rock, pop, ballads, r&b, rhythmic, hip hop, etc. Rock, in varieties like AAA, Classic Rock, Alternative, AOR, etc., is just rock of one kind or another.

<you want. this is tiring, of course a conservative toon will try to <wear you down no matter what is reality.

No, actual facts will wear down false impressions that can not be documented.

Actually, those of us who actually talk to lots of listeners know that the erosion of radio Time Spent Listening started in the late 80's, well before the Internet was an issue.

And there has been no erosion of the number of people who use radio... it is constant in the 94% to 95% range as it has been since the 60's when Arbitron began.

Why is total listening time down somewhat? There are lots more leisure time "competitors" starting in the 80's with additional channels on cable, then going into video games, increases in the average American's work hours, etc.

There are about 120 million active game consoles in the US, per the consumer electronics association, and gamers are not listening to radio.

Then there are DVDs, video on demand, internet browsing, the emphasis on fitness, and there are all kinds of things that ding total time spent listening to radio. It is not streaming alone and it is not iPods... in fact, several of the other options are much more impactful.

Try doing a 600 person perceptual study of the audience of one station or format, and ask about leisure time activities and time allocations, and you will see that the internet is only a fraction of the issue. Hell, calling plans with free night minutes and free long distance at any time take as much time away from radio in younger demos as streaming.

There are some real practical limits... and they come to community standards. A discussion of drug legalization is OK, while a person giving instruction on how to best set up a bong might not.

WHAT IS ISLAM ?

I know that, my article may be unusual ,but it might be useful. PLEASE read it

WHAT IS ISLAM

Islam is composed of three main areas: Utterance (to testify that there is no god worthy of worship except Allah and that Muhammad is His slave and messenger), faith, and deeds.

Faith is to believe in Allah, the Angels, the Heavenly Scriptures, Prophets, the last Day, and in the ability of Allah to will the existence of good or bad.

Deeds are: Salat (Prayers,) Zakat (a certain fixed proportion of the wealth - liable to Zakat - of a Muslim to be paid yearly for the benefit of the poor,) Siyam (Fasting,) and Hajj (Pilgrimage.)

Faith in Allah

1. We believe that Allah is one God, our Lord and the Lord of everything, and the Creator of everything.

2. All other than Him are created, and are servants who share nothing with Allah. Even Angels and Prophets are merely created servants submitting to Allah.

3. Among them are Jesus and Muhammad (Peace be upon them); both have no trace of deity (godhood).

4. Allah is the Living Self-Subsisting, Eternal, the First without a beginning and the Last without an end.

5. He hears everything and sees everything.

6. He is Most Gracious, Most Merciful, All-Dominating and He has the Most Beautiful Names and the Noblest Attributes.

7. He has created us out of nothing, and made us in the best form and He has given us all graces and bounties.

8. Hence we are not permitted to worship or submit to any other than Him, whether a favorite Angel or a chosen Prophet.

9. Whoever directs his prayers, bows or prostrates (in worship), or offers sacrifice to any other than Allah, he is an infidel and not a Muslim even if he declares that he is a Muslim. Allah says: "Say: Truly, my prayer and my service of sacrifice, my living and my dying are (all) for Allah, the Cherisher of the Worlds. No partner has He. And of this I have been commanded and I am the first of those who submit to His Will." (Holy Qur'an; 6:162-163)

10. Islam is the religion of Monotheism: it denies the Dualism of Magians and the Trinity of Christians. Islam teaches that Allah is One and only One. No one shares with Him, His Dominion or His Command. He has the Most Beautiful Names and the Noblest Attributes. Allah says: "Say! He is Allah, the One. He is The Most Unique, The Eternal, The Absolute. He begets not, nor was He begotten. And there is none like unto Him." (Holy Qur'an; 112)

Faith in Angels

1. Allah has created Angels to worship Him, to carry out His commands and to be His messengers to His Prophets.

2. One of the angels is Gabriel who used to bring down Revelation to our Prophet Muhammad (PBUH).

3. Another Angel is Michael who is in charge of rain falling.

4. A third one is the "Angel of Death" who is in charge of taking the souls of people whose death is due.

5. Angels are but servants honored by Allah.

6. Hence we honor them and speak of them respectfully.

7. But we worship none of them, nor do we take them as Allah's sons or daughters (as infidels claim).

8. We worship only Allah who created them in this wonderful kind of creation.

Allah (Glory be to Him) says: "And they say: The Most Gracious has begotten a son, Glory be to Him! They are but honored servants. They do not speak before He speaks, and they act (in all things) by His command. He knows what is before them, and what is behind them, and they offer no intercession except for those whom He accepted, and they stand in awe for the fear of Him. If any of them should say, 'I am a God besides Him', such one We should reward with Hell. Thus do We reward those who do wrong." (Holy Qur'an; 21:26-29)

Faith in Holy Scriptures

1. Allah has sent down to a number of Messengers, Books in order to proclaim them to mankind. These Books contain the Words of Allah.

2. Among them are the Sheets of Ibrahim (Abraham,) Taurat revealed to Musa (Moses,) Az-Zabour (Psalms) revealed to Dawud (David,) The Injil (Gospel) revealed to Isa (Jesus,) and the Qur'an sent down to Muhammad (Peace be upon them all).

3. Jews and Christians distorted some parts of their Books (Taurat and Injil).

4. Being the last Book assuredly guarded from corruption, the Qur'an confirms the truth in the previous Books and guards it.

5. Whatever, in those Books, differs from the Qur'an is corrupted or abrogated. Allah (Glory be to Him) says: "And We have sent down to you the Book (this Qur'an) in truth, confirming the scripture that came before it, and guarding it…" (Holy Qur'an; 5:48)

6. Allah revealed the Qur'an in Arabic and has firmly promised to protect it. His last Message is free from all corruption; He, Most High, says about the Qur'an: "We have, without doubt, sent down the Message, and We will assuredly guard it (from corruption)" (Holy Qur'an; 15:9)

Faith in Prophets

1. We believe that Allah chose from among mankind some Prophets to deliver His Guidance. From among those Prophets He selected Some Messengers.

2. He sent to the Messengers Laws and commanded them to proclaim these laws and to clarify them to their people.

3. Some of the great Messengers of Allah were Nooh (Noah,) Ibrahim (Abraham,) Musa (Moses), Isa (Jesus,) and Muhammad (peace be upon them all).

4. Embracing Islam does not mean to disbelieve in Moosa, Isa, or any other Prophet.

5. Islam teaches you how to believe correctly in all Prophets. Allah (Glory be to Him) says in the Qur'an: "And We have sent down to you the Book (this Qur'an) in truth, confirming the scripture that came before it, and guarding it (clarifying the truth they distorted) …" (Holy Qur'an; 5:48)

6. Allah mentioned the names of a number of Prophets, He, Most High, says: "Say you (Muslims): We believe in Allah, and the revelation given to us and to Ibrahim, lsma'il, Isaac, Ya'qoob (Jacob) and the Tribes, and that which was given to Moosa (Moses), and Isa (Jesus), and that which was given to all Prophets from their Lord. We make no difference between one and another of them, and we submit to Allah (in Islam)." (Holy Qur'an; 2:136)

7. The first Prophet was Adam, father of mankind (PBUH).

8. Muhammad, the Prophet of Islam (PBUH) is the seal (the last) of the Prophets. No Prophet is to come after him up to the end of this world.

9. Hence the fact that Islam is the only true religion to remain up to the Last Day.

10. He is Muhammad son of Abdullah son of Abdul-Muttalib. He is an Arab from (the famous tribe) of The Quraysh, a descendant of Ibrahim (Abraham) and Isma'il (Ishmael) (peace be upon them all).

11. He was born in Makkah (Mecca) in 571 AD (Known as the Year of the Elephant).

12. Allah sent Revelation to him when he was 40 years old.

13. He stayed in Makkah 13 years calling people to (believe in) Allah. Only a limited number of people believed in him.

14. After that he emigrated to Al-Madinah and invited its people to believe in Allah, they accepted.

15. He established the Islamic state, and in the year 8 AH (After Hijrah) He died at the age of 63 after the whole of the Qur'an was revealed, and all Arabs embraced Islam.

Faith in the Last Day

1. We believe that there will be another life after this life.

2. When the determined term of this life comes to an end, Allah will command an Angel to sound the Trumpet and all mankind and all other creatures will die.

3. Then he (Angel) will sound it again, when, behold, all dead since Adam will stand out of their graves.

4. Then, Allah will gather all people to account them for what they did.

5. Those who believed (in Allah), accepted the Messengers (as truthful) and did good deeds (commanded by Allah), Allah will put them in Paradise. In Paradise, they will enjoy eternal Bliss.

6. But those who rejected the Messengers and disobeyed Allah's commands will be put in Hell. In Hell Fire, they will be in continuous eternal punishment.

Allah (Glory be to Him) says: "As for him who had transgressed all bounds, and preferred the life of this world his abode will be Hell-Fire. And for him who feared of standing in front of his Lord's (Tribunal), and restrained (his) soul from lower desires, his abode will be Paradise." (Holy Qur'an, 79:37-41)

Faith in Fate and Divine Decree

1. We believe in the timeless knowledge of Allah and in His power to plan and execute His plans and nothing could happen in His Kingdom against His will.

2. His knowledge and power are in action and command at all times over His creation.

3. He is Wise and Merciful and whatever He does must have a meaningful purpose.

4. If this is established in our minds and hearts, we should accept with good faith all that He does, although we may fail to understand it fully, or think it is bad.

I can't use my old Remington electric chainsaw to cut ''it'' off because that democrap B HO Butt Kisser Dumbass who lives catty corner across the street from me, he broke my chainsaw.HUMP! he once told me he is an old country boy (from Bolton,Mississippi.You know where Bolton is, don't you?) and he knows all about chainsaws.I had to show him at least seven or eight times how to turn it on.He couldn't figure out that little side button on the handle must me held in before the chainsaw can be turned on.

Last Spring, he (he once said he is sixty two years old) bought a lawn mower at a pawn shop.Believe it or not, he couldn't find the oil drain plug on the bottom of the engine.He pushed his lawn mower over to my sidewalk and knocked on my door, he hollered,,, Show me where that oil plug is!

That is the way it is with ALL democraps and libturds, They Don't Know Shit!

I am from Carthage,Mississippi, www.thecarthaginian.com my family moved to Jackson in 1949 when I was eight years old.Maybe I am not exactly an old country boy, but I have always known about chainsaws and lawn mowers.

Minority Broadcasters Seek Federal Aid
By FAWN JOHNSON

WASHINGTON --A group of minority broadcasters asked Treasury Secretary Timothy Geithner Monday for financial assistance akin to the aid that has been extended to the financial and auto industries.

"Minority-owned broadcasters are close to becoming an extinct species," the letter said. "Even in better economic times, minority broadcasters have historically had difficulties accessing the capital markets."

The broadcasters told Mr. Geithner they can bounce back if they are given some temporary assistance while the credit markets are slow. "Unlike the auto business, broadcasting has been healthy for many years," their letter said.

The broadcasters appeal follows a proposal sent in May to Mr. Geithner by a group of influential House members asking for a minority broadcaster support program, bridge funding, or government-backed loans.

The House letter was signed by House Majority Whip James Clyburn (D., S.C.) and a group of key committee chairmen, including Financial Services Committee Chairman Barney Frank (D., Mass.)

http://www.discoverthenetworks.org/individualProfile.asp?indid=2384

Ways and Means Committee Chairman Charles Rangel (D., N.Y.)
http://www.discoverthenetworks.org/individualProfile.asp?indid=2085

and Oversight Committee Chairman Edolphus Towns, (D., N.Y.).

At a hearing last week, National Association of Black Owned Broadcasters President James Winston told lawmakers that advertisers have severely cut investments in minority audiences at the same time minority broadcasters are having difficulty negotiating loan terms with banks.

Research from the Internet advocacy group Free Press http://www.discoverthenetworks.org/groupProfile.asp?grpid=7103 http://newsrealblog.com/2009/07/06/new-fcc-chair-picks-media-reformer-as-press-secretary/says minorities own just 7.7% of full power commercial radio stations and 3.2% of full power commercial TV stations.

Minority broadcast ownership also is an issue important to Federal Communications Commission Commissioner Michael Copps, who was acting chairman of the agency earlier this year.

Companies and groups that signed on to the Geithner letter included the National Association of Black Owned Broadcasters, the Inner City Broadcasting Coalition, the Spanish Broadcasting System, Taxi Productions Inc., and Carter Broadcast Group, Inc.

As evidenced by the hundreds of millions in fines assessed against radio since 1977 for Clapton's "Cocaine."

Or Johnny Cash's 'Cocaine Blues.'

Or Grateful Dead's 'Cocaine.'

Or the countless Cheech and Chong recordings that have hit the air since.

Please.

And then, there's Steve Miller's "Jet Airliner" which contained the phrase, '...all the funky shit going down in the city," when it hit the air on radio stations in markets across the country, straight off the album in April of 1977. I can speak with some confidence on this....I played it myself on stations in markets from small town Iowa, to big city Texas, through Missouri, Kansas and Illinois, over the years. It's playing in Chicago now.

Also playing in Chicago, on Bonneville's WDRV, no less, is Pink Floyd's "Money." Complete with 'that goody-good bullshit,' in tact. Even in morning drive.

Spoken word content has been cracked more than once. And jobs have been lost, to be sure. But lyric content has been challenged, has been taken to court, and has won in case after case.

You should have heard KDNA, St Louis, in its heyday. You'd have had a klong where you sat.

How to set up a bong was tame by comparison to KDNA.

Sorta of joking but with most of the major ISP providers no longer support usenet, it's a wonder if google will stop supporting it also.
I can't get it through RoadRunner and it's not worth the money for me to pay for a usenet provider. I suspect google would love to get everyone to switch to their own google groups.

Cheers and happy listening.

Belief in God by Shaikh Shahidullah Faridi
Published by Alyaa on 2009/4/19 (12 reads) It is mistakenly imagined by some that belief in a Supreme Being as the Creator and Controller of the universe is a mere emotional aspiration, a superstition of ancient times, irrational and illogical, and exploded by modern science. It is believed that scientists (physicists, biologists and others) have erected some theory which both refutes and replaces the traditional belief in God. Such ideas have only a very superficial grounding, and are the result of ignorance or an indifference to both the fundamentals of religious faith and the scope of the physical sciences. It is a significant fact in the history of world thought that very few people have ever made it their business to refute the existence of God. The views of the universe which are considered to be anti-religious are almost all agnostic, not atheistic, that is to say, they attempt to ignore the existence of God instead of denying it. This is true of certain views of modern science as well as of the ancient non-religious theories. The universe in which we live comprises an evident system of causes and effects, of phenomena and their results, and it is possible to discuss them indefinitely and construct theories about them, giving a superficial appearance of completeness. This is done, however, only at the expense of ignoring fundamentals or claiming that they cannot be known. If one were to search for a convincing statement based on firm principles that the existence of a Supreme Being is impossible, one would not be able to find it.
The reason for this state of affairs is that belief in God is at once instinctive, rational, evidential and intuitional, and it is only by deliberately neglecting to consider it that the non-religious attitude is maintained. It is instinctive in that man has an innate feeling of his own inadequacy and helplessness, which accompanies him from the cradle to the grave, a feeling accompanied by the complementary desire to seek refuge and support with a being who controls all those forces before which he feels himself inadequate. We put this feeling forward as instinctive, although it will immediately be perceived that it is also evidential. The weakness of man before all the uncountable influences over which he has no control is a fact so obvious as to require no discussion.

What is less well grasped by some who have claims to intelligence is that belief in God is fully supported by reason and logic, the principles on which all human intelligence stands. For instance, it is a basic requirement of reason that an effect cannot exist without a cause. However hard we press our mental faculties, we cannot conceive rationally of a causeless effect, and if we wish to postulate one we can only do so by temporarily putting our reason on the shelf. Reason leads us to the conclusion that just as the elements which compose the universe are effects of certain causes, the universe itself must be the effect of a cause, a cause which is itself mightier than and outside the universe. Non-religious thinkers have to ignore the origin of the universe and postulate something existing in the beginning without any known cause. This postulate is essentially non-rational and therefore unscientific, but it is a necessity for those thinkers who have unconsciously or deliberately decided not to consider fundamentals. Of these there are even some who openly proclaim their refusal to discuss or admit any metaphysical concept. This kind of attitude, however, can only be upheld by abandoning reason. Reason itself guides us inexorably to the conclusion that there is an ultimate cause, the Cause of causes, beyond this universe of time, space and change; in fact, a Supreme Being.

Another of the basic demands of reason is that diversity cannot exist without a fundamental unity. Whenever the human mind is confronted with diversity, it immediately sets to work to synthesise it into unities, then to synthesise these unities into higher unities and so on until it can go no further. The ultimate result of a rational consideration of diversity is to arrive at a unity of unities, a Supreme Unity, the producer of all diversities, but itself essentially One. Whichever fundamental of reason we select, if we follow its path we are led inevitably to the same goal - belief in God, the Supreme Being.

Besides the conclusion arrived at by purely rational processes, man is led to the belief in God by observation and experience. One of the principal reasons for man’s refusal to recognize the existence of God is the intellectual arrogance produced by his appreciation of his own powers of analysis and synthesis, of harnessing physical forces by his ingenuity, and of constructing complex machines to do his work for him. But pride is caused by concentrating too much attention on one’s own virtues and blinding oneself to one’s defects. What are the best of man’s mechanical inventions but a poor and crude imitation of what already exists in an infinitely finer form in nature? By copying in an elementary fashion some of the functions of the human eye, he has been able to evolve the camera; but what comparison has this machine, made out of lifeless materials, to the living stuff of the eye, and to the refinement, brightness, clarity, flexibility and stability of its vision, its immediate connection with the mind which sifts and appreciates all it sees, all without a complicated system and controls, and directly under the command of the human will? Take any organ of the body and study it - the heart, the brain - and it will immediately be obvious that it is quite outside the scope of man’s ability to conceive and fashion such an instrument. The petty imitations of man are attributed to his great cunning, artistry and intelligence. Is it then reasonable, logical or scientific to attribute the infinitely finer and more perfect instruments of nature to such vague and blind energies called by names such as the ‘life force’, or ‘matter in evolution’, and leave them undescribed and unexplained? If logic has any validity (and if it has not we had better stop thinking altogether and become animals), the intelligence which conceived and wrought myriads of such delicate and astonishing devices must be infinitely superior to the human intelligence (even the human intelligence is one of its products), and have control of all the materials and workings of the universe. Such an intelligence can only be possessed by a Supreme Being, the Creator, Fashioner and Sustainer of all things.

If we ponder our own place in the world, we find that we (as well as all other beings) are kept in being by a most intimate combination of forces and conditions, which is so delicate that even a small dislocation would cause our total destruction. We live, so to speak, continually on the brink of annihilation, and yet are enabled to carry on our complex existences in comparative immunity. We cannot live, for instance, without daily rest; both the human body and the human mind are constructed to need it. This fact is not in itself surprising, but what is surprising is that the solar system collaborates with us in our human frailty and provides us with a day and a night exactly suited to our needs. Man cannot claim to have compelled or persuaded the solar system to do so; nor can the solar system claim to have modelled human physical and mental energy to conform to its own movements. Both man and the solar system are evidently linked in a total organisation in which man is the beneficiary; the organiser of these inexplicable concordances can only be a Supreme Controller of the universe and mankind. Sweet water is a necessary condition of human existence; it is equally necessary for those plants which produce man’s staple foods, which themselves depend on each other. If sea water were to invade our rivers and wells or rain down from the sky, is there any doubt that we should all die of hunger and thirst in a few days and the whole world become an empty desert? Yet sea water is only held back by an invisible barrier over which we have no control, and the sun and the clouds co-operate in order to desalinate our water for us and so give us life. This linkage of interdependence and concurrence could be extended indefinitely by taking examples from the physical world, and to describe it as ‘fortuitous’ is only begging the question; moreover it is a contradiction in terms. Fortuity is the name for something which does not come within any known system or regulation, an apparently meaningless and haphazard occurrence. To call a system which is a balanced and cohesive organization fortuitous is obviously self-contradictory and fallacious. A ‘fortuitous system’ is, simply, an absurdity. If we observe carefully we can see that the whole of the universe is interdependent and interlinked and therefore not fortuitous but planned. Belief in God means, precisely, belief in a Planner of the universe.

A basic element in human consciousness - a suprarational element - is a sense of value and purpose in respect to life. Even the worst of men is prevented from becoming completely bestial by this feeling, and in the best of them it dominates their whole existence. The senses of good and evil, right and wrong, beauty and ugliness, fitness and unfitness, truth and falsehood are such that however attacked by the missiles of constructive analysis, they remain intact within their intuitional fortress. In all ages and conditions, man has not been able to divest himself of the idea that behind its external effect, every action possesses a quality by which it may be judged and graded in the scale of final values. In addition to the consciousness of the existence of these values, there is the feeling that it is the purpose of man's life to attain those qualities which reflect the highest of them, that not only are they excellent in themselves and worthy of being acquired, but that they must be acquired, and that he has been created to acquire them. The natural sense of qualitative purpose, if allowed to develop freely without the cramps of agnostic prejudice, leads him to the conception of an absolute good and an absolute truth as the ultimate standard of human existence, and from there (for a quality cannot exist except in a being who is qualified by it) to a being who is the possessor and author of these qualities, the Supreme Purposer.

The decisive vindication of the existence of God is evidential. At various junctures in world history and in widely distant places, certain men have arisen and proclaimed that they have been inspired by God to give His message to mankind. These men were not mad; we have historical records of several of them, including all or part of the message they insisted that they were called to deliver, and it is obvious that they were men who were intellectually and morally highly impressive. They did not come all at once so that we could attribute them to a sort of historical fashion. They came spaced throughout history usually at a time of great moral degeneration. If we examine their message, we find that apart from differences of expression, attributable to the milieu in which they lived, they not only bear remarkable similarities but are basically identical. They have stated that God had conversed with them in some inspirational manner, and had ordered them to proclaim His Existence as the Creator, Maintainer, Controller and eventual Destroyer of the world, to describe His Mercy and Justice, and to warn mankind that it is only by remembering and worshipping Him and following the moral and practical principles that He has laid down for them that they can achieve success and happiness here and hereafter.

The last of these prophets was Muhammad of Mecca, who stated that there would be no prophet after him, and it is a demonstrable historical fact that no-one has been able to establish a claim to prophethood since. Now those who discuss or refuse to discuss the existence of God almost invariably rely on rational or anti-rational arguments and rarely, if ever, consider the evidential factor. The two basic elements in human knowledge are, firstly, our own observations and conclusions, and secondly, the evidence of others. Among the branches of knowledge the whole of history, for example, and most of the average man's acquaintance with science, are only known from the evidence of others, unless he himself is a specialist in the subject. When specialists in a certain branch of knowledge continuously assert that a certain thing is a fact, it becomes a necessity for the rest of mankind, who are unable to acquire this knowledge directly, to accept it as such. In the field of direct inspiration from God, and knowledge of His qualities and works, we have the repeated evidence of people in history who have affirmed their apprehension of Him and that they have been charged with conveying His message; not only that, the realities of the divine and spiritual realism as described by these prophets have in various degrees been corroborated and confirmed by the spiritual experiences of an uncounted number of their followers right up to the present day. These corroborators have been the saints and mystics of their various communities. This continuous and widespread evidence of the existence of God, the central and original evidence of prophets, and the derivative and confirmatory evidence of their followers, all based on modes of direct and intuitional perception of His Being, cannot with any reasonability be denied or ignored. To deny or ignore them is patently illogical and unscientific, and against the basic principles of the acquirement and dissemination of human knowledge. In addition to being instinctive, intuitional, and logical, belief in God has irrefutable evidence to prove its verity.

As evidenced by the hundreds of millions in fines assessed against radio since 1977 for Clapton's "Cocaine."

Or Johnny Cash's 'Cocaine Blues.'

Or Grateful Dead's 'Cocaine.'

Or the countless Cheech and Chong recordings that have hit the air since.

Please.

And then, there's Steve Miller's "Jet Airliner" which contained the phrase, '...all the funky shit going down in the city," when it hit the air on radio stations in markets across the country, straight off the album in April of 1977. I can speak with some confidence on this....I played it myself on stations in markets from small town Iowa, to big city Texas, through Missouri, Kansas and Illinois, over the years. It's playing in Chicago now.

Also playing in Chicago, on Bonneville's WDRV, no less, is Pink Floyd's "Money." Complete with 'that goody-good bullshit,' in tact. Even in morning drive.

Spoken word content has been cracked more than once. And jobs have been lost, to be sure. But lyric content has been challenged, has been taken to court, and has won in case after case.

You should have heard KDNA, St Louis, in its heyday. You'd have had a klong where you sat.

How to set up a bong was tame by comparison to KDNA.

We are, I think, talking about today. Most of what Stern did when on terrestrial radio would likely get the FCC in a uproar today; stations are fined when celebrities who are totally out of a network's control utter cuss words.

"Cocaine," I heard this morning. Is that current enough for you?
"Money" I heard about an hour ago "bullshit" intact. "Jet Airliner" over the weekend.

And Mancow has been using Cheech and Chong drops, making anti-gay, anti ...his words...Jesse Jackass, and blatant drug references for months.

You need to get out of the server farm, once in a while.

"Cuss words" are not prohibited. Words that describe sexual or excretory functions in an offensive manner are the only words prohibited (with the usual "fire in a crowded theater" exception).

"You're either with us or you're with the terrorists."

Decoding Bush's Newspeak

by Rick Gee

In George Orwell's 1984, Newspeak is the official language of Oceania, the imperial state. Unlike traditional dictionaries that add words with each new edition, each succeeding edition of the Newspeak dictionary contained fewer words. Not only was the vocabulary reduced in volume, but also the words in use were stripped of all but the narrowest connotation. The goal of Newspeak was to render independent thought and dissent next to impossible.

The use of Newspeak has become rampant in recent years. President George W. Bush's speechwriters surely had a Newspeak dictionary at the ready while preparing his crucial address to the nation on Thursday night (you just know that Bill Clinton, who took parsing the language to new lows, was kicking himself for running for president four years too soon). When Bush addressed a joint session of Congress, he was really addressing the American television audience. His goal? Rally the subjects to "America's New War."

To do so, the president employed a great deal of Newspeak. Let's take a closer look at some examples from that address, and also reveal what he really means.

"I thank the Congress for its leadership at such an important time . . . by delivering $40 billion to rebuild our communities and meet the needs of our military."

Gee, I only asked for $20 billion. But hell, I'll take it. And there will be more where that came from, right boys? That's good, because communities surely cannot rebuild themselves without our divine intervention. And despite the fact that we spend as much on defense as the next six nations combined, the cost of hegemony is very expensive.

"America has no truer friend than Great Britain. Once again, we are joined together in a great cause."

We saved your bacon in two World Wars, so now it's your turn to send your sons and daughters off to all corners of the globe to die in order that we may both expand our power.

"Americans have known wars, but for the past 136 years, they have been wars on foreign soil, except for one Sunday in 1941."

War is only unacceptable when it occurs within our borders. Hey, that Pearl Harbor metaphor sure comes in handy.

"Americans have known surprise attacks but never before on thousands of civilians."

Surprise attacks by our military have killed thousands of civilians, but you won't hear about it on CNN.

"The terrorists' directive commands them to kill Christians and Jews, to kill all Americans, and make no distinctions among military and civilians, including women and children."

Terror wrought by our military has killed countless civilians, including women and children, but you won't hear about it on ABC.

"Our war on terror begins with al-Qaida, but it does not end there. It will not end until every terrorist group of global reach has been found, stopped, and defeated."

This campaign will take forever. War is the health of the state. We must put an end to all terrorism, even if it means perpetrating more of the same.

"Americans are asking: Why do they hate us? They hate what we see right here in this chamber, a democratically elected government."

They hate what they see right here in this chamber: a government that arrogantly interferes in the affairs of almost every other nation, consequences be damned.

"They hate our freedoms, our freedom of religion, our freedom of speech, our freedom to vote and assemble and disagree with each other."

They hate our freedom to disagree with each other. By the way, have I mentioned yet that you are either with us, or you are with the terrorists?

"We will direct every resource at our command: every means of diplomacy, every tool of intelligence, every instrument of law enforcement, every financial influence, and every necessary weapon of war to the disruption and defeat of the global terror network."

We will pretend to employ diplomacy, but how do we reason with terrorists? We will expand the power of the FBI and CIA to snoop on you just in case you might be a terrorist. We will empower the police to stop you at will and demand to see your National ID card. We will confiscate even more of your wealth to fund our military as it engages in the impossible task of fighting fire with fire.

"Americans should not expect one battle, but a lengthy campaign, unlike any other we have seen."

I am the commander-in-chief. I have the power to send young men and women to the Middle East to die for their government. It says so right in that Constitution that I routinely ignore with impunity.

"And we will pursue nations that provide aid or safe haven to terrorism . . . (f)rom this day forward, any nation that continues to harbor or support terrorism will be regarded by the United States as a hostile regime."

Except for Egypt, Saudi Arabia, Pakistan and any other nations that pretend to be our friends.

"Either you are with us, or you are with the terrorists."

Get in line, or else. That means you, too, lowly subjects. Support your government; it knows what's best for you.

"We will take defensive measures against terrorism to protect Americans."

But don't mistake me for George Washington: We will not engage in free trade with everyone, and we will maintain our entangling alliances.

"Today, dozens of federal departments and agencies, as well as state and local governments, have responsibilities affecting homeland security. These efforts must be coordinated at the highest level. So tonight I announce the creation of a cabinet-level position reporting directly to me: the Office of Homeland Security."

I know that we already confiscate an obscene portion of your money, but it's not enough. For you to be truly secure, we need even more of your money. And we must concentrate even more power in the central state.

"I have called the armed forces to alert, and there is a reason. The hour is coming when America will act."

War is the health of the state, war is the health of the state, war is the health of the state.

"We ask every nation to join us."

We demand that every nation join us. To repeat: You are either with us, or you are with the terrorists.

"We will ask, and we will need, the help of police forces, intelligence services, and banking systems around the world."

Forget about your sovereignty. Forget about your liberties and your privacy.

"The thousands of FBI agents who are now at work in this investigation may need your cooperation, and I ask you to give it."

You might know a terrorist. You might be harboring a terrorist. You might even be a terrorist. If so, we will find out about it. Resistance is futile.

"We will come together to improve air safety, to dramatically expand the number of air marshals on domestic flights, and take new measures to prevent hijacking."

I know the FAA didn't protect anyone on September 11, but starting right now, it will, I promise. Sure, on an average day 40,000 flights are in the air in the US, and putting an air marshal on every flight will cost millions, but you do want to be protected, don't you? I realize that passengers carrying concealed weapons loaded with frangible ammunition would end hijackings overnight, but that could only happen in a free country.

"We will come together to promote stability and keep our airlines flying with direct assistance during this emergency."

We will expropriate more of your hard-earned wealth to subsidize the airlines. Remember, though; with more federal dollars come more federal regulations. Heck, we might have to take over the entire industry.

"We will come together to give law enforcement the additional tools it needs to track down terror here at home."

We will suspend habeas corpus (I am a member of the Party of Lincoln, after all). We will force Carnivore down the throats of every ISP in the US, if not the world. We will eviscerate what's left of the Constitution. It's all for your protection.

"We will come together to strengthen our intelligence capabilities to know the plans of terrorists before they act, and find them before they strike."

The abject failure of our intelligence agencies to stop the terrorists on September 11 was a fluke. We'll get it right next time. Really.

"As long as the United States of America is determined and strong, this will not be an age of terror; this will be an age of liberty, here and across the world."

As long as the government of the United States is determined and strong, this will be an age where we export terror and hegemony so that others across the world can be forced to be free.

"I will not yield. I will not rest. I will not relent in waging this struggle for the freedom and security of the American people."

I will be the president for the next three to seven years. I will do everything within my authority to concentrate power in the central state so that you will have the security that only the state can provide. And since this country is governed by polls, I will take polling data that suggests most of you are willing to trade liberty for security as a mandate. Forget what Benjamin Franklin said; that was over two hundred years ago, long before the airplane was invented.

"Fellow citizens, we will meet violence with patient justice assured of the rightness of our cause, and confident of the victories to come."

WAR IS PEACE

FREEDOM IS SLAVERY

IGNORANCE IS STRENGTH.

I don't even know where there is a server farm.

And Mancow has been fined and sanctioned repeatedly; the Commission is considerably less tolerant today. Remember, the FCC is not proactive but reactive. All it takes is a complaint about a song with "bullshit" in it to get them started. Many groups and stations already have policies against such content and have eliminated or edited songs to comply with internal policy.

That is just one part of the FCC's regulation of indecency. The rest is contained in the vague mantra of "community standards" and while we have had no list of prohibited words... even Carlin's set of 7 was never formally prohibited... there is an understanding and belief that gratuitous profanity and cussing would be subject to review.

I remember seeing a Bone Fone Radio ad many years ago, I think it was in one of my old Mechanix Illustrated magazines.

One more roof rafter I need to make today.The front overhang roof rafter I made, I need to rework one side of that rafter because the angle is a little bit too high.Then I need to cut a bunch of short 2'' by 4'' blocks so I can anchor those roof rafters down to the top of my old trailer.No nails anywhere, I use three inch galvanized drywall screws throughout.The 2'' by 4'' studs and rafters are tighter than Dick's hat band on my old trailer.Then I need to put some Onduran www.onduran.com corrugated roofing on top of the rafters and then I need to put some plywood siding on my trailer and then I will paint it all up reallllll purrty, white with green trim.

Nothing wrong with getting some ''trim'' once in a while.

And again, the song has been playing, here, on Bonneville's WDRV since the frequencies were acquired from the Florians. Unedited, played regularly. As recently as last evening.

For clarification, that would be just YESTERDAY. And I'll hear it again, likely, TOMORROW.

Disk jockeys flapping their gums get cracked regularly for their content. But song lyrics have been challenged for years. And have those challenges have been beaten in the courts, for years.

Again, as late as YESTERDAY. If there would be complaints, you'd think it would be within Bonneville itself.

As for Mancow...SOME, but not all of his stations have been fined, over the years. He's been on the air here, again, for nearly a year now. And his content isn't changing.

But by all means, don't let the facts get in the way of a good pedantic rant.

We coould call it Palin Madness Syndrome, but since the symptoms are already so similar, best to avoid confusion. Can't we just call it Liberal Derangement Syndrome and not need a different acronym for each conservative?

No, the bullshitter is in your mirror. Your only saving grace is a better vocabulary and writing style than Mr. Ace.

I have never been near a server farm, and the closest one I know to exist is in central Washington state. There may be one down the street, for all I know, but since programming and programming research have been my concern for the last coupla' decades, I have little practical interest in knowing where a bunch of servers are located, and even less curiosity.

From discussions at the recent NAB, every communications attorney in DC and elsewhere seems to be cautioning it's clients on the use of profanity which goes beyond the clearer "sexual acts and excretory functions.... appealing to the prurient interest" guidelines. Additionally, content which appears to promote the use of drugs is being given greater review.

In my example, I mentioned something to the effect of "giving instructions on setting up a bong.." which could be interpreted to be consent to or promotion of the usage of (illegal) drugs. That's different from references to a drug, spoken, sung or otherwise.

Most stations and operators do not want to be "the" test case on a new application of community standards, since there have been rulings such as the Boise case where "local" has been taken out of the application of standards, meaning that community standards are whatever the FCC decides them to be.

Every time I drive out of town, I am passed by speeders. I know, and they know, that there is some degree of certainty that they will be stopped and fined. Similarly, many station operators know that they are operating in a gray area, and may be fined. Some risk the consequences since there are no black and white rules in place. Others do not take the risk as they do not want to be the cause of the determination of such rules.

What's not understood by many is that things like the "F" word are not prohibited... just most uses of it are, based on content. But if a PBS station had a professor who discussed how offensive terms made their way into the language, including the word origins and applications, the FCC would likely not find such usage offensive.

But the consensus is that there is more attention being placed on content than we have seen for many decades.

Nice academic backpedalling. But it doesn't address that your statement was simply wrong. Stations DO run songs with drug references. Jocks DO say make drug references in their patter.

And they do it today. With impugnity.

If some choose not to, that's not a blanket incumbent on the broad number of stations.

If there's more attention to content, it's focussed on things like race, sex, and politics. Drug lyrics still get a pass all over the country.

And for the record, consensus does not equal truth.

Yeah, we are businesses just like WalMart and Joe's Pizza.

But the business model is as defined.

1. We can not sell to advertisers unless we have lots of listeners.
2. We can not have lots of listeners unless we make each of them happy.
3. To make individual listeners happy, and to make advertisers buy, we have to identify a large group of people with similar taste.
4. If we appeal to individual listeners in such a group, we will also appeal to all the members of the group.
5. At that point, we can sell to advertisers because we have the necessary collection of individuals.

> Listeners are a tool to that end.

This is a closed loop. Make listeners, one by one by one, happy and you can make advertisers happy. The listeners can only be made happy if we make advertisers happy, because to the contrary, there is no income to continue to please each listener and all listeners.

> But research says we like these songs, doesn't it. So, choice, and > variety is not an option.

"Research" is the process of letting the listeners determine the songs (or talk topics or morning shows) they wish to hear. Individual listeners are surveyed, and the commonalities among the largest group determines what airs. The listeners have total choice, while the station has, essentialy, none.

> "the commonality that has a base in a large group of people with similar

"Broad"casting is about appealing to as many people as possible. As even you have said, radio is not a concert and is listened to one by one, one on one. So, to get a big group, you have to find a bunch of people that behave very similarly. So to serve any single individual person is, thus, to serve them all.

Pretty simple. Identify a commong group, where serving the group is serving each member of the group.

> It's a simple contradiction in terms. You cannot serve the individual by > reducing the individual to commonality.

Yes you can, if each member of the group looks for the same thing on the radio.

> Radio is not about the listener,

That makes a great headline, and justifies criticism of consolidation and all the "corporate radio" stuff....

Radio is about the listeners. And at stations or companies where it is not about the listener, bad things will happen.

Over and over we see examples of horrible stations that are not product driven, and which eventally become vulnerable and present opportunities to other operators.

> (BBC case example) Radio did what was right for radio. The listeners

And that is because no listeners were consulted. In the case of most local stations in the US, at least significant markets, we talk to listeners all the time.

Radio is a mass distributed medium. It can't even have regionalized editions like newspapers. Perhaps, when the distribution method includes things like WiMax, radio can also be more specifically targeted...

And that is why 95% of Americans continue to listen to radio.

LOL! More corporate noise.

You can't, by definition, reduce individuals to an average commonality and claim to be serving the individual. You are serving the commonality. A commonality of your construction. You select the criteria for the target, you create the commonality as a saleable product.

Again, attempting to convince that your product is the desire of the individual.

It's not. It's about the needs of Radio.

Your product is targeted to the commonality. Sold to the individual as desireable. Which the individual may or may not accept based on tastes and availability of more specifically desireable alternatives. Of which there are more every day.

In the era of mass customization, yours is the outmoded concept.

But when you're paycheck is written on an industry, you don't really get to see, or especially admit, the other perspective to that industry. Something that's been underscored by your pedantry since your intrusion, here...to wit, Radio is about what's good for Radio. Radio sells it as service to the listeners. But as you, yourself, have pointed out, listeners are of such importance they may be abandoned at will, if the commercial needs of Radio demand it. You have said so repeatedly.

Radio selects its target, creates it's offering, and sells to desireable advertisers based on profitable target demographics.

That's not being about the listeners. That's about doing what's profitable for Radio.

The listeners are merely tools to that end. And they are, by your own words, expendable when Radio, and their advertising partners, desire them to be.

By the way, you've done something in your above post that you've not done until now....you've directly argued with and rebutted yourself.

LOL! O-o-o-o-o-o-o-o-oh Pancho!

Love, Cisco.

Kissy, Kissy.

RHF,

It's considered bad form to buttress your own positions with citations back to your own earlier posts. Using that approach, you can "prove" anything you've ever posted. Surely, even you can see how circular that is.

RHF,

It's considered bad form to buttress your own positions with citations back to your own earlier posts. Using that approach, you can "prove" anything you've ever posted. Surely, even you can see how circular that is.

Mike

While I do appreciate decorum and thank you for it, you do realize that you're addressing a lump of cabbage in your last post, don't you?

Words that describe sexual or excretory functions in an offensive (this is the part where prevailing community standards come into play) manner are prohibited. Carlin's list includes "tits" which is probably not so bad anymore.

The FCC cannot tell you you can't use any other words. That is the narrow scope of limits on free speech allowed by the Pacifica decision.

Hopefully that crap changed on 20 January this year. The only reason SCOTUS upheld the FCC against Pacifica was the ubiquity of radio receivers and the likelihood that a child could easily access the offending content. Very quaint 1976 logic, rendered completely irrelevant by cable TV and the internet. If kids are looking for smut, the last place they'll look is on the AM/FM/Free To Air TV.

Corporate broadcasters, wanting more deregulation, are a bunch of pussies. Rather than fight for their right to free speech, they cower and beg. Disgusting.

Commercial broadcasters are clueless. They have quit leading and become slaves to Lowest Common Denominator mediocrity. There seem to be a couple of bankruptcies a week; hopefully the new owners will have some balls.

The New York Times will ultimately get $45 million as part of a three-way deal in New York for Class B classical FM WQXR in the country's largest market. From atop the Empire State Building, WQXR's signal contour reaches 15,367,000 people, suggesting a station metric of only $2.93 per-person – a very low number even by recent historical standards.

Appraiser David Schutz tells Inside Radio, "It's still a painful pill to swallow in the new reality." He believes it puts last year's two much-talked about Los Angeles deals into perspective. Radio One sold urban AC "V-100" KKBT (100.3) to Bonneville for $137.5 million. More recently Emmis struck a rent-to-own $110 million sale of rhythmic AC "Movin" KVMN (96.9) to Grupo Radio Centro. With New York's WQXR going for just a fraction of that, Schutz says it seems to be a continuation of the downward trend in major market valuations.

I think that the only reason that it runs for 10 hours, is that the chip is completely stripped down, as evidenced by the complete lack of features. Funny, in the table-top models they have digital AM/FM, tagging, RDS, speakers, etc. This probably also keeps the price to $50. Thanks, but I'll stick to my excellent $10 Sony ICFS10-MK2. Samsung claims that their chip uses just 155mW, but that can't be trusted wilh all of the features stripped out of this portable POS. Struble just wanted to put out some POS portable to justify the FM-HD power increase. Maybe, the DSP would cause too much interference to an AM section? I posted a bunch of stuff on my blog about the power consumption, but decided to delete it because who knows exactly what these chips are processsing, which appears to be just FM-HD. The lack of AM-HD should really piss-off the AM-HD broadcasters, as this is a sign that Struble has pretty much given up on AM-HD.

We need IBOC to fail, especially on AM, which it seems to be doing on it own. If it takes the failure of AM/FM analog radio to stop IBOC, then so be it! LOL!

Radio is killing itself by sticking to an outdated programming idea. People no longer want to put up with the limited selection on terrestrial OTA radio and the pitiful playlists. Those are outmoded by new technology (mp3 players, net radio, etc.) and more and more of the listener base will drop away over time. It's not just AM, though the industry is doing it's best to kill the band.

3190. Some Empty Hands for Hartford's Arts and Heritage Initiative

You could imagine the surprise when recipients of Hartford's $1.1 million in arts and heritage grants were recently announced.
It was hard to find much of a heritage presence in the list of 23 recipients. Many of the city's established not-for profit arts organizations also got bubkis.
Forget the under-the-radar groups, places like the Bushnell Center for the Performing Arts, the Mark Twain House, TheaterWorks, the Old State House, Hartford Symphony Orchestra, Harriet Beecher Stowe House and Real Art Ways didn't get a dime from this new pool of funding. (Real Art Ways hosted an informational gathering when the initiative was announced to prospective arts and heritage groups. Maybe it should charge rent next time.)
It's inevitable that not all the 57 of those seeking grants -- whose grants collectively totaled five times than what the city allocated -- would get funded or even partially funded
But still, it was startling to see so many of the city's leading arts and heritage organizations which are regularly seen -- and promted -- as the cultural engines of the city not getting any "oil."
The mood was "disappointment" for many of the groups I contacted this week but no one wanted to go public with any hard criticism, perhaps for fear of being blocked out for future grants.
This is the first time the city has allocated funds for jobs-related grants for arts and heritage groups and it could be the start of regular funding, it is hoped. So no one wants to look like a sore loser, especially when the mayor is sticking his neck out with real dollars for an overlooked constituency.
The new program was proposed by Mayor Eddie Perez and passed by the city council (after the Mayor's budget veto threat when the council wanted to cut the new initiative). Grants ranged from $10,000 to $100.000 and its prupose was to be jobs-intensive.
A 10-member grant review panel -- made up of five reps from the Greater Hartford Arts Council (keep in mind these are biz and community figures, not artists) and five suits from the city -- made the final decision of who gets how much from the very rushed applications. (It would have been nice to see an artist or two on the panel, obviously ones not asking for dough.)
The $100,000 grants went each to the Wadsworth Atheneum Museum of Art; Riverfront Recapture, Hartford Stage and Charter Oak Cultural Center.
Other high-end recipients were the Galleries at Billings Forge which received $54,150 for an artist residency program; $75,000 for printmaker Adrienne Gale; $60,000 for HartBeat Ensemble; $65,000 for Hartford Children's Theatre and $61,065 for Artists Collective.
Other recipients include Hartford City Ballet ($30,000), Judy Dworin Performance Project ($16,380); Institute for Community Research

($35,000); Hartford Business Improvement District ($39,000); Family Day Enterprises ($10,000); Anne Cubberly $10,000) Connecticut Guitar Society ($14,900); Aslylum Hill Congregational Church ($10,000); CONCORA ($17,550), Connecticut Guitar Society ($14,900); Cultural Dance Troupe of West Indies ($10,000); Greater Hartford Festival of Jazz ($32,500); Guakia ($32,500); and Sankofa Kuumba Cultural Arts Consortium ($16,250).

David D. Pangore, director of the city's Department of Development Services, told me this week that the focus was on which grants would produce the most immediate and complete impact, producing jobs in the community.

He notes that $600,000 is expected in federaal funds for a similar program for arts and heritage groups. However, this new pool of money is expected to be specifically for groups with five staffers or less, so some of the city's important arts and heritage groups will be blocked out of this initiative as well.

If some of the smaller groups or individuals who receiced grants from the city's $1.1 million got their money from this up-coming federal pool, that would have opened up more funds for others in this first round.

The arts and heritage communities look like they're just swallowing the results, glad that some money is being directed to at least some good folks out there, and hoping that they can still be in the game in the future.

There is no doubt that there will indeed be people who will be employed in the arts and heritage community in the city -- many more than would have without the program.

Still, to eliminate any shadows of doubt about the project even more transparency may be in order. Perhaps next time the grants decision making conversations could be on cable access. After all, Hartford Public Access Television got a $30,000 grant.

Agree 100% with Peter Sissons. BBC top management has, IMHO, lost its marbles They screwed English broadcasts to N.America some time ago, along with RNW and DW, all of which were political decisions, not strictly technical decisions.I Don't bother to listen to any of them on the Web. I sit in front of a computer too much anyway, so why would I not use my radios to hear SW broadcvasts ??
They made dumb decisions and as such have lost a very large audience.

Does anyone have a schematic of the Realistic DX-400 (Radio Shack # 20-207) or the Uniden CR-2021 scanned that they can email to me?

It's suffering from the "FM only" blues that seems to be a common problem with this model.

I understand that the schematic is printed in the operator's manual for the Radio Shack unit. Surely someone must have one of these, and even have fixed this same problem before.

Thanks!

Over the years, I've used a portable Grundig radio to listen to both FM and Shortwave broadcasts. I have relied on the antenna that came with the radio, but this has, I'm sure, limited by listening capabilities.

Lately, I've been thinking about expanding my capacity: I'd like to have more selection in my shortwave stations (this receiver, for instance, doesn't support LSB or USB).

I've also noticed that a variety of options exist:

1) Tabletop shortwave units, combined with a quality indoor (or outdoor) antenna;
2) Tabletop wide frequency receivers, again coupled with a quality antenna; or,
3) Software-defined radios that essentially depend upon Windows machines to work.

Of these, the last option doesn't appeal to me because I make a living programming computers and would prefer a more "independent" medium. So, that leaves me with questions about options 1 and 2.

If someone has a wide-spectrum receiver (capable of receiving SW, LW, VHF, UHF, etc), could they also receive (digital) television signals, allowing them to use this receiver as both a TV tuner and a radio?

Because of where I live I cannot easily install an outdoor antenna, so I'm considering several indoor units ---again, this might depend upon whether I'm interested in SW or a wider frequency spectrum. Is this feasible? In other words: do any of you have experience with these units and do they work (of course I understand that you need a lot more information --my location, etc., but these are general questions).

Naturally, would appreciate any input from the group about reasonable alternatives.

Regards,

Tom R

Good question. I"m not aware of an ATSC adaptor for a stand alone radio at this point. Although, that's not to say there isn't one.

AOR, and ICOM and JRC come to mind as manufacturers of wideband radios for which NTSC adaptors were available, so you could, indeed watch TV on your radio. Pretty cool. Worked decently, too. Took a little getting used to, but fun.

Currently, ATSC portable portable TV's are just coming onto the market, so it may be a while, yet before ATSC adaptors are available for widebands. But I'm sure that's coming.

Indoor antennae are iffy at best in today's electronics rich home. Even attic antenna can be pointless given the hash produced by monitors, printers, TV sets, routers and digital cables strung around the house.

Outdoor antennae for HF radio listening can be large, require specific grounding, and transmission line installation considerations. A really good antenna will require some real estate, and a careful installation.

Alternatives include active antennae, which can be smaller, but more sensitive to locally generated hash; loops which can be smaller, more directional, but quieter than other actives; RF Systems Magnetic Transfer Antennae, which can be larger than active loops like the Wellbrook, but quiet, although they do require specific grounding. MTA's are less sensitive, but with the lower noise floor, and considering that most receivers have more than enough sensitivity to compensate, they can be highly effective performers.

I use an MTA, myself. With good results.

Active loops and MTA's can be mounted outdoors but concealed, well. They don't attract a lot of attention. Pricier than simpler outdoor antennae, though.

For VHF and up, there are a variety of small, space efficient antennae that can be equally well concealed. The discone is simple, quiet, omni directional, and easy to install. It offers a 1-2 db gain over isotropic. Commercial discones will typically reach to 1.3 Ghz. Some more, some less.

There are also actives for VHF and UHF. These may tend to overload with strong local signals, and strong local noise sources, so installation location will be important. Relatively small, and unobtrusive outdoors.

There are also a couple of HF-UHF actives. The same notations for HF actives apply here.

With VHF and up, the higher the antenna, the longer the reach, so, you need to keep that in mind. A passive antenna with height will generally be more effective than an active in the attic. A passive directional and a rotor will get you better S/N than an active omni.

For examples, check the Universal Radio website catalog, and the Wellbrook website.

From there you can spring to any manufacturer whose products interest you.

The stations aren't failing. The companies are failing at running them; big difference. Radio is not a high margin business. It is a labor of love and must serve many communities. Dwardo's approach is alien to the medium, and has essentially killed it.

Thank you for your quick and thorough response. I think that I'll have a look at that Wellbrook page, as well as Universal Radio, as you had suggested. I think that at the end of the day, I need to determine if I'm interested in SW alone, or if I want to attempt the wideband receiver. Interestingly, I don't watch TV, my significant other does and she hates dealing with the cable monopolies, so I though that this might be a nice ancillary benefit.

I don't do cable, or satellite, either. I have a very high gain antenna in the attic, a preamp and distribution amp, and very low loss coax, which ain't cheap.

Here in my location in suburban Chicago, I get all the Chicago stations, with their subchannels, all the Milwaukee stations with their subchannels. As well as all the Madison and Rockford channels.
45 at last count, and increasing all the time.

Cable is really good at providing another bill, but little else.

As for listening, keep in mind that you don't need to make any catholic decisions now. Pick an area of interest, and then expand as necessary. HF, for all intents and purposes is a separate animal than V/UHF. Propagation, noise floor, antenna and transmission line considerations are all different. Making wideband receivers and antennae expensive. And a wideband receiver will cost you, dearly, for decent HF reception.

Pick what interests you today. Expand at will as your interests evolve.

In my opinion, religion is not the problem. Fundamentalism is the problem: it causes hatred and death. Islam in it's fundamentalist version, kills out of devotion to a god. This is shameful. However, it's merely a sign of the times: the world is becoming more polarized, agoraphobic, and hateful. Islam, being a religion that sates the more base instincts/emotions of man is more susceptible to this twisted ideology. If the Fundie islamics don't end their stupidity soon, the non-islam world will react and we will see a religiously heated bloodbath of apocalyptic proportions; the Islamics will lose because Christians do not strap bombs on their children.

Cuhulin said, "I am Christian, Presbyterian, always have been, always will be. There isn't anything on Earth that will change me!" I appreciate that. Honestly.

I am Jewish and I am set, too. We, Christians and Jews alike, must not allow the world's growing polarization to affect us; otherwise we, too, become the problem.

Passport to World Band Radioï¿½ in Limbo

As with any good recipe, a range of ingredients has to come together if a reference book is to succeed. Solid content is, of course, essential. But in recent months other considerations have had an increased bearing on the future of Passport to World Band Radioï¿½. So it is that the 26th Edition of Passport to World Band Radioï¿½ is being held in limbo.

Despite this, for now we are continuing to maintain the WorldScanï¿½ database and uphold all proprietary material. Among other things, this should help allow for an orderly return to production, under IBS' aegis or otherwise, should conditions allow. For Passportï¿½ readers and our small team, alike, this is a seminal moment. After all, Passport to World Band Radioï¿½ goes back a quarter century and has had something like a million readers worldwide. But the future has its own rhythm that confounds prognostication. There may yet be more chapters to this story. Stay tuned.

While it would be sad to lose something that's been around as long PWBR, the proliferation of frequency lists and receiver reviews online would prevent PWBR's demise from being as crippling to the hobby as it might have been in the late 80's or early 90's. Thanks for passing the

As "World Band" (aka HFBC) is dead, it only follows that the TV Guide for Shortwave Listening should go away too. WRTH had better hardware

Tom...welcome to SWLing.

I've been fooling around with this stuff since the 60s. I'll probably step on some toes because people seem to become very possessive of their technologies these days but my experience has been that active antennas, indoor antennas, power line antennas offer only convenience. None of them out perform a simple longwire antenna strung up outside. It's not the rocket science some would you to believe. Just hang a wire between two trees in the clear and forget about it.

As for TV...the digital conversion was a blessing. We watch no TV now except old movies on our old set. We're enjoying it much more and don't have to put up with the moronic "news" coverage and drug ads.

Good luck.

The"Fairness Doctrine" is very APTLY named, because it would require talk radio to provide BALANCED views. Equal time for the sensible egalitarians, to counter the ludicrous and hateful whines

The SOONER the Fairness Doctrine is REINSTATED, the BETTER!!

Yeah, I've kept up with PWBR mainly for the equipment reviews which, despite a slight bias on behalf of heavy advertisers, I've generally given a lot of credibility, The station listings were out of date in weeks.

The Purpose of Worship In Islam
I hope you don’t mind receiving my letter. It is short but full of information.

The Purpose of Worship In Islam

Worship provides the believers with many benefits that contribute to both their spiritual and worldly well-being. Some of the most significant of these benefits are as follows:

1. Enrichment and development of the soul: The human body needs material resources for its existence, like food, drink, and a means of reproduction. As for the soul, its needs cannot be fulfilled except through nearness to Allah by means of faith and obedience, which can only be achieved through worship.

Allah must be worshipped in times of hardship and times of prosperity. Allah says:
We truly know how your heart is distressed by what they say. So celebrate the praises of your Lord and be of those who prostrate themselves and worship your Lord until the sure hour (of death).
Allah says:
When the help of Allah and the victory comes and you see the people entering into the religion of Allah in crowds, then glorify the praises of your Lord and seek His forgiveness. Verily He is Most Forgiving.
2. Realization of human freedom: Worship liberates the human being from subjugation to anything besides Allah and prevents a person from surrendering his or her will to false gods. This is true freedom that brings about security and contentment. Submission to Allah is a great source of strength. Allah says:
If anyone seeks might, then all might is with Allah.
3. Preparation for the life to come: Allah says, quoting Moses (peace be upon him):
O my people, this worldly life is but a provision, while the Hereafter is the eternal abode.
The worldly life is a time of trial. The substance of this trial is the worship of Allah in fulfillment of His commandments. Allah says:
(It is Allah) who created death and life to try you as to who is best in deeds.
4. Social reform: We find that worship, in its most comprehensive meaning, embodies every possible means of individual and social reform. This is because every individual and collective endeavor can enter into the domain of worship. Islam has prescribed certain obligations on the societal – as opposed to the individual – level.

This takes societal needs into consideration. Allah says:
Allah has promised those among you who believe and do righteous deeds that he will give them authority in the Earth as He has done for those who came before and that He will establish their religion that He wants to replace their fear with security. They may worship Me and not associate partners with Me.
The advent of Islam brought about great reforms in the domain of worship. Islam came at a time when there were many forms of worship in the world. Some of these were remnants of the previous divinely revealed scriptures. Others were completely man-made. Even those acts of worship that were of divine origin had been corrupted, altered, and removed from their proper contexts.

Some religions exaggerated the importance of formalism and mindless ritual. Others went to extremes to free themselves of all notions of form and order. Some religions went to extremes that made worship a harmful and painful thing. Some of them also demanded monasticism from their adherents. Other religions went to extremes in indulgence, often completely abandoning religious obligations altogether.

Islam came to correct and reform these excessive tendencies, while establishing principles of its own. It provided principles to bring about reform and to safeguard worship. The most important of these principles is that no one deserves to be worshipped except for Allah.

The first thing that Islam came with was the concept of monotheism. Bearing witness to monotheism is how a person enters into the fold of Islam and is considered to be a believer. The testimony is as follows:

“There is no God but Allah. Muhammad is the Messenger of Allah.”

These words are a testimony that there is no one worthy of worship except for Allah. In this way, Islam negates every possible manifestation of polytheism.

Allah addresses His Messenger (peace be upon him) with the following words:
It has been revealed to you and to those who came before you: If you commit polytheism, your deeds will be naught and you will be among the losers.
We can see how the Prophet (peace be upon him) prohibited anything that could lead the people to polytheism or to their falling into excessiveness in their belief. He made it clear that he was merely a slave of Allah and His Messenger. He said: “Do not praise me excessively the way that the Christians praised Jesus the son of Mary. I am only Allah’s slave and Messenger, so say that I am His slave and Messenger.”

He also said: “None should seek help through me. Help should be sought from Allah alone.”

Near the time of his death, he would repeatedly say: “Allah’s wrath became severe towards those people who turned the graves of their Prophets into places of worship.”

He also said: “Whoever takes an oath in other than Allah’s name has fallen into polytheism.”

He said: “Allah has cursed those who offer sacrifices to other than Allah.”

The Purpose of Worship In Islam
I hope you don't mind receiving my letter. It is short but full of information.

The Purpose of Worship In Islam

Worship provides the believers with many benefits that contribute to both their spiritual and worldly well-being. Some of the most significant of these benefits are as follows:

1. Enrichment and development of the soul: The human body needs material resources for its existence, like food, drink, and a means of reproduction. As for the soul, its needs cannot be fulfilled except through nearness to Allah by means of faith and obedience, which can only be achieved through worship.

Allah must be worshipped in times of hardship and times of prosperity.
Allah says:
We truly know how your heart is distressed by what they say. So celebrate the praises of your Lord and be of those who prostrate themselves and worship your Lord until the sure hour (of death).
Allah says:
When the help of Allah and the victory comes and you see the people entering into the religion of Allah in crowds, then glorify the praises of your Lord and seek His forgiveness. Verily He is Most Forgiving.
2. Realization of human freedom: Worship liberates the human being from subjugation to anything besides Allah and prevents a person from surrendering his or her will to false gods. This is true freedom that brings about security and contentment. Submission to Allah is a great source of strength. Allah says:
If anyone seeks might, then all might is with Allah.
3. Preparation for the life to come: Allah says, quoting Moses (peace be upon him):
O my people, this worldly life is but a provision, while the Hereafter is the eternal abode.
The worldly life is a time of trial. The substance of this trial is the worship of Allah in fulfillment of His commandments. Allah says:
(It is Allah) who created death and life to try you as to who is best in deeds.

4. Social reform: We find that worship, in its most comprehensive meaning, embodies every possible means of individual and social reform. This is because every individual and collective endeavor can enter into the domain of worship. Islam has prescribed certain obligations on the societal as opposed to the individual level. This takes societal needs into consideration. Allah says:
Allah has promised those among you who believe and do righteous deeds that he will give them authority in the Earth as He has done for those who came before and that He will establish their religion that He wants to replace their fear with security. They may worship Me and not associate partners with Me.
The advent of Islam brought about great reforms in the domain of worship. Islam came at a time when there were many forms of worship in the world. Some of these were remnants of the previous divinely revealed scriptures. Others were completely man-made. Even those acts of worship that were of divine origin had been corrupted, altered, and removed from their proper contexts.

Some religions exaggerated the importance of formalism and mindless ritual. Others went to extremes to free themselves of all notions of form and order. Some religions went to extremes that made worship a harmful and painful thing. Some of them also demanded monasticism from their adherents. Other religions went to extremes in indulgence, often completely abandoning religious obligations altogether.

Islam came to correct and reform these excessive tendencies, while establishing principles of its own. It provided principles to bring about reform and to safeguard worship. The most important of these principles is that no one deserves to be worshipped except for Allah.

The first thing that Islam came with was the concept of monotheism. Bearing witness to monotheism is how a person enters into the fold of Islam and is considered to be a believer. The testimony is as follows:

He also said: None should seek help through me. Help should be sought from Allah alone.

Near the time of his death, he would repeatedly say: Allah's wrath became severe towards those people who turned the graves of their Prophets into places of worship.

He also said: Whoever takes an oath in other than Allah's name has fallen into polytheism.

He said: Allah has cursed those who offer sacrifices to other than Allah.

Geez, that sounds similar to a flick that I once saw going back 25 - 30 years ago. I seem to recall a traitor selling out the group in the movie that I saw. But the guillotine was there.

I mostly just remember the end, where some foaming at the mouth guy offers to let them live, if they accept the =3FMark=3F, and they refused, and go, one by one to the Giant Vegamatic. I think maybe they got caught due to someone ratting them out, but I=3Fm not sure. The acting was like high school, and the budget wasn=3Ft much more than what a HS play would be, except for the camera and film. It was in color though, woo-hoo!

I=3Fve looked for it, without success. I would like to see it again, just for yucks. No doubt Telemundoh takes it seriously, as he does the Obama BC story.

So do I. Because his grandmother said she was there when he was born in Kenya. Because his father was Kenyan and a British subject. Because he's keeping his school records hidden. Because his brother and sister can't agree what hospital he was born in. And because he lies through his teeth on numerous occasions.

You know, stuff like that.

he was a citizen of. He was born in Hawaii, and has proven it, to all

DW Radio, via Sines, Portugal, on 6180 at 0457 UTC in English. Multiple IDs, into DW Radio News at TOH, 1st item about protesters in Iran after Rafsanjani speech. SIO-433, with splatter from below from Vietnam-Sackville. Broadcast targeted to Central Africa. (Bryant-KY, E1, July 18)

RHC, Havana, Cuba, on 6140 on 0510 UTC in English. YL w/ nx report on Taliban successes against US troops in Afghanistan. Tremendous signal, but only a trace of audio making it through. Something must be wrong at the transmitter, resulting in strange SIO of 552. //6010 seems OK. // a weaker spur on 6220. (Bryant-KY, E1, July 18)

R.Australia, Shepparton, Australia on 9580 at 0840 UTC in English. M & YL with report on 40th anniversary of Neil Armstrong's stepping onto the lunar surface. SIO-454, much stronger than //9590. (Bryant-KY, E5, July 18)

RNZI, Rangitaiki, New Zealand, on 6170 at 0855 UTC in English. Classical mx up to TOH, 5+1 pips at top of hour, M w/ ID and into news. 1st item about New Zealand investigators helping w/ investigation of Jakarta hotel bombings, 2nd item about accidental shooting death of 11-yr old NZ boy. SIO-454, good. (Bryant-KY, E5, July 18)

NHK, via Sackville, Canada,on 9795 at 0945 UTC in Japanese. Standard Japanese social grouping, one male, several females, lots of talk and giggling. SIO-343, fair to good. Targeted to S Am, some of the signal must be skipping over. (Bryant-KY, E1, July 18)

I have to wait untill the snail mail van toots down the street,,, because those Assholes who deliver the snail mail hardly ever bother to close my snail mail box door properly.Then, I needs to go to the Lowe's store and buy two boxes of three inch long galvanized drywall screws and some boards (purling strip boards) and some Ondura corrugated roofing for my old trailer.After I get that crap on my trailer, then I needs to buy ten sheets of 4' by 8' plywood, and then paint it.
I will be sooooooooo Glad when I am done with workin on that old trailer! ,,, I might go to Disneyworld.

Whistleblower, Corsi writes, obtained an affidavit submitted by Rev. Kweli Shuhubia, the official Swahili translator for the Anabaptist Conference held annually in Kenya.

In the affidavit Shuhubia states that he visited Obama's grandmother at her home to conduct a telephone conference interview with Bishop Ron McRae in the United States, in which the bishop asked Sarah Obama if her grandson was born in Kenya.

"Ms. Sarah Hussein Obama was very adamant that her grandson, Senator Barack Hussein Obama, was born in Kenya, and that she was present and witnessed his birth in Kenya, not the United States," Shuhubia states in the affidavit. "During the conversation, Ms. Sarah Hussein Obama never changed her reply that she was indeed present when Senator Barack Obama was born in Kenya."

LOL, funny when that recording is translated accurately, she doesn't say anything of the sort. But accuracy and common sense is something all kooktards have a deep aversion to. Kind of like taking your meds.

Not an "ass kissing" anything, just not a raving birthtardic loon. Let's see, nobody on either side, with all that was up for grabs (Becoming POTUS) during all the primaries, and before the election, and even after, never mentioned any doubt about where he was born, yet a few sick birthtardic loons insist there's some question where he was born. You're so far out there now, can you even see Earth from where you're at?

Cue the Twilight Zone theme music...

It's been obvious for some time, you suffer from a severe case of birthtardery. It's so funny for us folks who don't have any contact with you, so tragic for your family.

Rave on, rave on. Make me laugh.

He was born in Hawaii, get over it, and get a life, whatever life you can get at this point.

I have a deep aversion to slackjawed nitwits who call people names and think they can just say any old shit (like "the translation was wrong") and think it means anything more than the sound of the fucking wind blowing Ass-kissing true believer. That's someone who thinks his messiah can tell no lies, even though he told a buttload to get elected. Someone who thinks his measly off-the-cuff denial trumps the word of an official translator/reverend and a bishop.

Listen to Silence of the Liberal Fascists - * crickets *

Kennedy may have gotten the ball rolling, but it was Johnson that upped the ante, sending over a quarter million troops over there during his tenure, and what? 20% losses? The war was a fiasco. Nobody seemed to know what they were doing. A war run by committee. With losses of over 50,000 of our kids, no wonder the war became so unpopular back home. That's a LOT of grieving families!

As for Walter Cronkite having anything to do with any of it, like they say, don't shoot the messenger. Vietnam was the first war ever so widely covered. The first to be basically televised. The first to bring the gore of war into our homes. It woke us up as a society.

I found an unopened copy of Windows Vista at a yard sale last week for $10. The guy said he bought it but then traded his laptop in on one with Windows 7. I've been sitting here all week looking at this WIndows Vista and I cannot build up the nerve to load it on my Windows XP machine. My Windows XP works so well I hate to return to the Follies d'Renton and go back at square one with patches and updates for the next few months trying to get my computer then to work as well as it works now. If it's not broke don't fix it. Too bad the MS folks don't smoke test their software before unleashing it on us.

I know..."no guts, no glory." I am sure there are a few other sayings that would fit here too.

But jeez I hate to fiddle with something just to have the newest...that probably is little different from what I got now.

Isn't that the way technology dupes us into buying all this crap in the first place?

Besides, by the time Internet II replaces the Internet we have now I doubt I will even own a computer.

GL on Windows 7...hope the transition goes smoothly for you.

Which American Presidents murdered the most Americans?

The Father of Liberal Fascism - Woodrow Wilson (DEMOCRAT) - murdered
53,402 American soldiers in World War I (1917–1918).

The Son of Liberal Fascism - Franklin D. Roosevelt (DEMOCRAT) - murdered 291,557 Americans soldiers in World War II (1940–1945).

The Brother of Liberal Fascism - Harry S Truman (DEMOCRAT) - murdered
33,741 Americans soldiers in the Korean War (1950–1953)

The Grand-Sons of Liberal Fascism - John F. Kennedy (DEMOCRAT) and Lyndon B. Johnson (DEMOCRAT)- murdered 47,424 in the Vietnam War (1964– 1975)

Desert Shield/Desert Storm (1990-1991) Battle deaths 147
President George H. W. Bush (REPUBLICAN)

Global War on Terror Battle deaths 3,776
George W. Bush (REPUBLICAN)

This is a good trick. Window 7 has not yet been released, IIRC, it's due out in September. If there's a version of Windows 7 installed on the laptop, it's either:

1) a beta version that's been hacked (they have shut off all the beta versions already)

2) a "Release Candidate" version, either hacked or unhacked. If it's not been hacked, it will expire and quit working the day the official release comes out.

or

3) a pirate copy of the official release (or a predecessor of it) that was leaked to the net.

Any way you look at it, the guy that bought the Windows 7 laptop should be wary of the OS he's running.

or

4) He doesn't have the laptop yet, but has pre-purchased one with a factory Windows 7 load.

DON'T

Vista is crap that why I got windows 7 early.

7 comes out the 20 of next month, it replaces all the xp's and Vista.

Vista is junk, that's why they came out with 7.

You can make 30 days.

Depending upon the version of Vista, you could open a can of worms that would bring a flock of birds your way.

Many pieces of hardware do not, and will not, have drivers for Vista.

Various versions of Vista have extremely restrictive DCMA software that won't even let you load or play your own ripped mp3 files or pre-recorded video.

There have also been issues with various application programs not running in Vista, requiring you to install and run a "virtual machine" to run Windows XP compliant programs. In addition to this, Vista dropped all "legacy" support for 16 bit software. This is not normally a problem for most users, but some have "favorite" screen savers or nostalgic video games that will no longer run on Vista (or Windows 7 for that matter). Vista will not run most emulators without tweaking.

Windows 7 Release Candidate

Notice: Downloads will end August 20

Say sorry I called you a liar Burr.

And this 7 is good until June so I can wait until they get the bugs out before I buy it.

BWHAHAHAHAHA! You've got a lot of improvement to even get to "slackjawed nitwit", and whole lot more than that to get to "subnormal", but I guess it does give you a goal to work towards..

Sorry, but us normal folks won't wait for you.

ROTFL. He's a politician, he always lies. But there's more than enough proof about where he was born to satisfy anyone but the most extreme of kooktards, such as yourself. I know you don't realize how far gone you are, so you might want to ask a friend or family member, and maybe they will tell you the facts of life and get you treatment.

Meanwhile, keep the kookery coming.

BWHAHAHAHAHA! Holy shit, you're a gold mine of loonacy. The only dissenting "voices" are the few raving birthtards like yourself. A sad few mental patients who don't really count, except for comedic value, and in that, you're worth more than your weight in gold.

Sorry, voices in your head is a symptom of kooktardery. Why isn't someone intervening, and getting you some help?

I'm working on a spoof song about a dufus from Kentucky (figures) who lies about having a PhD.

dxAce

USA

Drake R7, R8, R8A and R8B
70' and 200' wires

239 countries heard and 224 QSL'd (veried for those in Glendale) using the NASWA Country List.

And, as always, don't let your children attend the Sullivan College of Technology & Design.

They've hired at least one dufus who once claimed to have a PhD, and who knows, there may be more dufi there.

The Bush Crime Family and Halliburton loomed large in all 3 conflicts mentioned here, and no doubt dozens more. The world would be much safer if we'd remove the profit motive from war.

Don't forget Castro, Shah Razi Pahlava, etc. Seems wherever we prop someone up, there is a revolt either by the people or the propee.. maybe Gene Roddenberry had something with that "non-interference Prime Directive". How much worse could it be? :)

Ah, but it settles a lot of questions that might have come up as a result of simply saying that Vista is a P.O.S... some might think that statement arbitrary and capricious.

That whats his name guy, Omar Kadafi, (spelling) in Libya.It was U.S.fed govt that got him installed as the big shot of Libya.
There were people over there doing cartwheels and a long line of 12 year old girls on both sides of his route, they were literally biteing the heads off of snakes as he was passing by them.

U.S.fed govt also shoe horned the DUMBASS Five Names USURPER into the White House.

I wonder how many other foreigners in the past, U.S.fed govt has shoe horned into high foreign govt offices?

At least dozens of them, I would bet.

I am typing on a $200 WalMart Everex desktop computer. It works great.
My amateur radio computer has a $40 motherboard, a $120 Core 2 Duo processor, a $30 high efficiency power supply, $20 worth (2 gigs) of RAM, an old 80 gig PATA drive, and a used case. It will run circles around your giant Velocity Micro.

I have a netbook doing web radio duties. I have another that monitors 10.140 MHz (USB) for psk31 traffic and reports any activity to the pskreporter on the internets.

I have never paid more than $500 for a personal desktop computer.
Including my ProTools machine.

The Center for Family Development is Western New York's only attachment center specializing in the treatment of adopted and foster families with trauma and attachment disorder. Our professionals have the knowledge, skills, personal experiences, and professional training to help adoptive and foster families with attachment concerns. The Center for family Development has focused much of its efforts on helping adoptive and foster families. The needs of adoptive families are unique and very few professionals understand these families and their special problems. The Center for Family Development was founded by Dr. Arthur Becker-Weidman to provide answers to questions, solutions to problems, and the expert support necessary for families to thrive in these turbulent times.

Dr. Arthur Becker-Weidman and his associates are dedicated to helping adoptive families achieve their potential. All members of the Center For Family Development are licensed, skilled, and highly trained professionals with at least twenty years experience helping families. Arthur Becker-Weidman, CSW-R, PhD. DABPS received his doctorate in Human Development from the University of Maryland, Institute for Child Study. He achieved Diplomate status from the American Board of Psychological Specialties in Child Psychology and Forensic Psychology. He is a member of the American College of Forensic Examiners. Dr. Becker-Weidman has received extensive training in Dyadic Developmental Psychotherapy, an attachment-based therapy, including with Daniel Hughes, Ph.D., author of Building the Bonds of Attachment and Facilitating Developmental Attachment.

At the Center For Family Development we only begin working with families after completing a thorough assessment. We carefully evaluate the child and the family. Our success rate is now over 95%. Success means that the child has developed the capacity to love and be loved and is functioning at least at about 80% of the level you'd expect for a child that age. See our Research page for the results of our follow-up study.

Dyadic Developmental Psychotherapy, an attachment-based therapy is an evidence-based treatment for children with Trauma-Attachment Disorders, Reactive Attachment Disorder, and other disorders of attachment that are complicated by severe trauma or histories of maltreatment. Other forms of treatment such as play therapy are ineffective with children who have disorders of attachment and complex post-traumatic-stress-disorder because all these therapies require a trusting relationship between the therapist and child. See our follow-up study in Child and Adolescent Social Work Journal, a professional peer-reviewed journal. This demonstrates that Dyadic Developmental Psychotherapy is an evidence-based effective treatment for children with Reactive Attachment Disorder. Please see our Informed Consent document for more information.

Parents of attachment disordered children experience a high level of stress and need support and understanding in order to help their children and survive as a family. The Center for Family Development offers a support group which is intended as an opportunity for parents to share parenting strategies, learn about approaches that work, support others, find support, and develop cooperative respite arrangements. This is not a treatment group or therapy.

Short lived short wave rocker?

Was that the station where the owners arraigned playing "Sympathy for the Devil" during a fund raising pitch by the Christian outfit that wanted to buy them? So the prospective buyers could show their donating audience how "evil" they were.

I think they also used KUSW audio as torture to keep Noriega awake when they were trying to bust him in Panama.

Acc to http://www.dxinfocentre.com/time.htm , I should be able to pick up time signals at at least SOME of those shortwave frequencies.

Since 2002, they have become harder & harder to pick up. Are they being replaced by the internet??

My receiving equipment? Don't laugh: old-school boomboxes, which all had SW1 & 2 bands on them covering from 2.5kHz up to 22 - 25kHz.
Don't say it's my boomboxes, because I still get plenty of BBC, VOA, other broadcasts in every language imaginable, and enough religion that I need never step near a church(!). The only thing missing:
those beepin' time signals.

Any clues where the signals have gone?

Sorry, but it is the boomboxes that you're using. WWV doesn't have nearly the signal strength of those stations you mentioned. Factor in time of day and overall conditions, you may get a signal every now and then but certainly not on a regular basis.

I also had a big Aiwa boombox back in the 80's and while I also got the BBC and VOA with it, that was all I got with it.

Well, I actually do pick up a LOT on them - just can't name every program that I turn the dial past, so only the obvious come to mind here. Sometimes the material I get is so bunched together I need to use the fine-tune knob on those boxes that have it, just to pick out all the stations ontop of each other.

That still doesn't explain the very conspicuous absence of those time signals.

Many of the time signals of years past are long gone, though the list you cited seems to be fairly up to date.

I was very interested in time signal stations in years past and believe I have 27-28 of them QSL'd (veried, for those in Glendale).

dxAce
Michigan
USA

Drake R7, R8, R8A and R8B
70' and 200' wires

239 countries heard and 224 QSL'd (veried for those in Glendale) using the NASWA Country List.

And, as always, don't let your children attend the Sullivan College of Technology & Design.

They've hired at least one dufus who once claimed to have a PhD, and who knows, there may be more dufi there.

I was just curious, because when I set all my watches to within a second of the time off the shortwave, its amusing at work and at peoples houses to see just how all over the place the time is set!
Even WABC 770 in NY, consistently when a news caster(Charles McCord, Bruce Anderson, or Jen Nitosso) states the time it's at least 30seconds behind the time on my watch! What radio station is more than 10 sec off, let alone over half a minute?

Some folks I understand they set their watches 5 minutes fast, to "keep ahead" of things, but come on.

I prefer to get these signals off shortwave than off the internet(up to 1/10th second delay) or phone(1/20th second delay), and can't believe of all the services the government is cutting in times of economic crisis they cut time signals!!

3372. Comprehensiveness of Worship In Islam

Comprehensiveness of Worship In Islam
I send you today a good article. It could be new and adds to your knowledge.

Comprehensiveness of Worship In Islam

The Islamic understanding of worship allows the whole of one's life to be an act of worship, as long as the objective of that life is the pleasure of Allah, which is achieved by doing good and refraining from evil. A person can turn everyday activities into acts of worship by purifying his or her intention and sincerely seeking Allah's pleasure through these activities. Allah's Messenger (peace be upon him) said: Greeting a person is charity. Acting justly is charity. Helping a man with his steed is charity. A good word is charity. Every step taken on the way to performing prayers is charity. Removing an obstacle from the road is charity.
Earning a living can be a form of worship The Companions saw a man and were astonished by his hard work and industry. They lamented: "If he were only doing this much work for the sake of Allah…"

Allah's Messenger (peace be upon him) said: "If he is working to support his small children, then it is for the sake of Allah. If he is working to support his elderly parents, then it is for the sake of Allah. If he is working to occupy himself and keep his desires in check, then it is for the sake of Allah. If, on the other hand, he is doing so to show off and earn fame, then he is working for the sake of Satan."

Even the most natural acts can become acts of worship if they are accompanied by the proper intention: Allah's Messenger (peace be upon him) said: "When one of you approaches his wife, it is an act of charity."

The same can be said for eating and drinking, as long as it is done out of fear of Allah and seeking to obey him.

In order for these otherwise mundane actions to be counted as acts of worship deserving of divine reward, the following conditions must be met:

A. The action must be accompanied by the proper intention. Allah's Messenger (peace be upon him) said: "Actions are but by intentions, and a person gets only what he intended."

B. The action must be lawful in and of itself. If the action is something prohibited, its perpetrator deserves punishment. Allah's Messenger (peace be upon him) said: "Allah is good, and He accepts only what is good."

C. The activity must be performed in the best possible manner. Allah's Messenger (peace be upon him) said: "Allah has prescribed excellence for all things." He also said: "Allah loves that if one of you does something, he does it well."

D. The dictates of Islamic Law must be completely observed. Deception, oppression, and iniquity must be avoided. Allah's Messenger (peace be upon him) said: "He who deceives us is not one of us."

E. The activity should not keep the person from performing his or her religious obligations. Allah says:
O you who believe, do not let your wealth and children distract you from the remembrance of Allah.

OK, I'm straining here, but wasn't KUSW the name of the rock station on shortwave in the mid-80's? It broadcast from Tooele, UT (about 25 miles west of SLC). It played a lot of louder "headbanger" rock of the early 80's. As I remember it, the military used the KUSW broadcasts on loud speakers (from a sub?) to drive Noriega out of sanctuary in the church he holed up in during the Panama invasion. A form of auditory torture...

I know that by the late 80's, the religious Trinity Broadcasting Network had bought the station as the global pilot ship of the TBN network, KTBN.

There ought to be some old news accounts of the Panamanian invasion (excuse me, "police action") that ought to be able to verify whether or not this story is true.

Pretty sure,

When all else fails, try Wikipedia:

"Non-religious private broadcasters

While most private shortwave broadcasters in the United States are operated by religious groups or carry mostly religious programming, there have also been attempts at starting non-religious shortwave stations.

Two such stations were WRNO in New Orleans and KUSW in Salt Lake City, both of them with a rock and roll music format. Both stations were well received by shortwave listeners, but could not make the format successful in the long run. KUSW wound up being sold to the Trinity Broadcasting Network and is now religious broadcaster KTBN. WRNO kept its rock & roll format going for most of the 1980s but eventually switched formats to selling brokered airtime to political and religious broadcasts, suffered a damaged transmitter, and eventually ceased broadcasting altogether following the death of its owner, Joe Costello."

Hey, someone needs to update Wikipedia....

Verification of the Noriega story from RationalWiki.com:

"After the U.S. invasion of Panama, the target of the invasion, strongman Manuel Noriega, sought asylum in the Vatican diplomatic mission represented by Monsignor Jose S. Laboa. To induce Noriega's surrender, U.S. forces played loud music outside the embassy[2] by cranking up the rock & roll from the armed forces' Southern Command Network radio station (which took requests and played such things as Van Halen's "Hang Em High" and Iron Maiden's "Run to the Hills"), and sometimes switching to shortwave station KUSW out of Salt Lake City for a change of pace. "

That's found under the heading : "Abuse of music as torture"...

For sale, does not work properly. No fm, am works and lw, others unknown. Has been sitting for years, most likely need to be recapped. No top handle, no antenna hold down plastic clips though antenna is there, good for parts i guess. If you hit the radio it does come on then motorboats. Offers? Plus shipping from PA. N3UVT.

Scratchy? I'm not surprised. The 60 rpm vinyl record is getting pretty worn. The drunks at the time station starting the needle wherever they want also does not help.

CC,

On the East Coast of the USA you should get the WWV Times Signals on 5, 10 and 15 MHz at 10 KW various times of the Day.
http://en.wikipedia.org/wiki/WWV_(radio_station)

Middle of the Night : 5 MHz [5,000 kHz]
Mid-Day : 15 MHz [15,000 kHz]
Mornings & Evening : 10 MHz [10,000 kHz]

The 2.5 and 20 MHz signals at 2.5 KW may not be as easily heard.

Hang on a minit and I will git my tape measure and I will measure my Velocity Micro computer,,,

It meaures about seventeen (I wish I was 17 years old again) and one eighth inches (17 1/8'') tall by about eighteen (I would even settle for if I was 18 years old again) and three quarters inches (18 3/4'') from front to back and about seven and thirteen sixteen inches (7 13/16'') wide.

I like big wide and tall computers, so I can reach in there and work on them if I need to.You can run your computer in mineral oil, if you want to.Check out www.pugetsystems.com

I don't know if I have ever seen Full Metal Jacket before,,, I don't think I have. I doubt if I could reach my arms all the way around my Velocity Micro computer.I am not going to try that either.

Chris,

You didn't mention what equipment you were using however any of the garden-variety Wal-Mart type consumer short waves generally has abysmal calibration and frequently cannot be depended upon to "hear" the whole band pursuant to its frequency display. Also there are new shortwave bands that continuous coverage short waves often include but they've dumped the old tried-and-true bands like 60 meters (5 mc).

Yes, CHU is now on 7850 kc. They are the only organization that seems to have cared enough of what their listeners preferences were. They were going to drop their 41 meter facility altogether but conducted an e-mail survey and listened to what the users wanted. They did have to move due to ITU frequency reallocation nonsense.

I suspect your bigger problem has been propagation. It's been awful the last few weeks. Be patient. Your old friends are still there beeping and will be back when Ol' Sol settles down.

WA9VLK

P.S. Use of mc/kc is intentional although writer acknowledges its being unfashionable. Whatever.

Most people don't realize that they spend hundreds or even thousands of dollars a year buying the heavily advertised (HA) brand products in the grocery and department stores. There is nothing in the grocery store that is rocket science. Many of the less advertised (LA) brands or store brands are just as good or better as the HA brands. You are paying for the brainwashing that many HA brand manufacturers put in their advertising campaigns. It is not difficult to make shampoos, conditioners, cleaning products and all those other products that can be found in your local grocery or department store. Why are you paying 4+ dollars for baby shampoo when you can buy the less advertised brand for half the money? Do you like wasting money? If the name brand products are better why would companies be spending billions of dollars in advertising? The answer is that they are not better. They are trying to convince you that the high price they are charging is some how justified by a better product. Studies have shown that many times the most expensive product is the worst product or has no better performance than most of the median priced products. Even over the counter drugs like aspirin can be bought for half the price of the HA brands. This is a product that has been around for decades. The LA products are under the same FDA regulations as the HA brands. Save a lot of money and don't buy the over priced HA brands. When you pay the higher price for the HA brands you are paying for the ridiculous high salaries of the CEO's, private jets, golden parachutes and for the billions spent on advertising.

==========
CQ Magazine is reporting the following:

CHU Moving to 7850 kHz

After seventy years of broadcasting Canada's official time, radio station CHU will move from 7335 KHz to 7850 KHz. The change goes into effect on 01 January 2009 at 00:00 UTC.

In April 2007, the International Telecommunications Union re-allocated the 7300-7350 KHz band from "fixed service" to broadcasting. Since then, interference on the 7335 KHz frequency has come from many broadcasters around the world, prompting CHU's move.

Gotta agree with Brenda here. Don't know if I like Palin or not - don't know if I would have voted for her on a presidential ballot next time or not. BUT I'M not impressed by some THAT WALKS OUT ON THEIR ELECTED DUTY BEFORE THE TERM IS UP. I kinda think the republican party isn't going to be impressed by that either.

Chris,

Still there.... I get 2500,5000,10000, and 15000... 20000 at daytime on a good good day
CHU on 3330 and 7850 come in the best here

WWV is not very good for determining radio conditions, for most of us, it comes from the opposite direction (Fort collins) than most signals....

Obama [D] 44% -v- Romney [R] 44% in 2012

Obama [D] 40% -v- Romney 34% & Palin 16% [I] in 2012

Palin will run as an Independent and be "The Spoiler" to Assure Obama's Re-Election in 2012.

In 2012 it will be the whole Perot -v- Clinton -v- Bush thingee all over again : Except Palin will be playing Perot's divide-and-conquer part for the Democrats ~ RHF

Probally as safe as the other people who were in Vietnam.How safe is that?
I was at Shannon Wright Compound for about two and a half months, then I was transfered to Tan Son Nhut. www.tsna.org About two weeks after I was transfered to Tan Son Nhut, Shannon Wright Compound was attacked by the Vietcong.Not long after I was transfered to Tan Son Nhut, one of our units at Bien Hoa was attacked by the Vietcong.I was driving the second truck in line to Bien Hoa.I have a letter of commendation about that.

Safe is relative to what? Nowadays, I don't feel safe in my own neighborhood.If you could watch WLBT tv news www.WLBT.com or WJTV tv news www.WJTV.com or WAPT tv news www.WAPT.com every day, you would see what I mean.

There used to be a time many years ago when everybody in Jackson and the Jackson suburb cities felt safe, those years are long gone.

Most likely a remote studio feed from South America. The only way to find out is record and post it on a web page so someone can help you translate it.

I agree as to the harmonic. Also check your IF in your radio: Where does 29.68 +/- twice your IF land you? If in the 26 MHz range, sometimes those were used for broadcast radio links.

29.68 is allocated to the Amateur Radio Service, which forbids music and should be FM on that frequency.

At Tan Son Nhut, I drove a Deuce and a half truck almost every day.I helped get ammo loaded on pallets and banded up.A lot of times I used a forklift and I took ammo to the hard stand.I had to step into an office and phone a certain phone number and let them know there is a load waiting on the hard stand.I always had to say, WORKING, when I stepped into that office.An Army guy by the name of Seargent Funk from Mechanicsville,New York was always sitting at one of the desk inside of that office.

I used to drive the truck every morning right after chow to the front gate and pick up half a dozen Vietnamese guys who worked with us at the ammo dump.There was a Vietnamese gal and I had to drop her off at an office on our way to work.One of the Vietnamese guys said she is a butterfly girl, she flys from man to man.

It's allocated that way for the US, not necessarily elsewhere. Everywhere but the US, 40m is an international broadcast band (or, most of it is).
IIRC, our 10m band here in Korea stops around 29 MHz. Our 2m stops at 146 (I get taxicabs on the upper end of my 2m rig, but can't legally transmit there)

RV with it.

I talked to a friend three-four weeks ago whos daughter goes to the University of Cincinnati.
He told me his daughter and a group of her friends and ANOTHER group from Northern Kentucky University, receive nice little checks simply from patrolling the internet.

I wished I knew how to "get in".....I'll make up all kinds of things if Obama's henchman are stupid enough to actually send me a check. Apparently they do, pretty pathetic IMO.

And FWIW, before BDK or his butt buddies say it's bullshit, I've known this guy since I was twenty years old and he had absolutely no reason to lie to me about this. It's a brave new world out there.:-)

Actually, your grammatical insertion of the word OF makes absolutely no grammatical sense whatsoever. Dave's original sentence is at least grammatically feasible.

I do get 7850 CHU, that's about all. China Unicom? Strange, the language seem to alternate between Eng and French!

I think my environment is the least conducive to solid short-wave performance of anyone's on here: Steel-frame apt building, digital OTA converter boxes, VCRs, and other electronics. I've got to take this box down to a park away from this electro-magnetic stew some Maybe in certain situations, your premise may be true. Example: where a brand name food company, in order to gain better productivity and keep all of their lines busy, will do private label work. In the grocery field, there are many companies that do nothing but produce product for brand companies, cranberry juice is a good example here in New Jersey.

Having worked in the pharmaceutical/consumer product manufacturing industry,
I can tell you that your premise is full of holes. While the regulations affecting 'brand' companies and 'generic' companies are the same, in many cases the enforcement by FDA consists of measuring the company's compliance to its own internal operating procedures. Normally, the FDA tells you what to do, but not how to do it. They will then opine that your procedure is adequate or not. The major (brand) companies certainly go to greater efforts in meeting Current Good Manufacturing Practice (CGMP) than do the generic companies.

You cite aspirin (acetylsalicylic acid) as an example. There are many differences in asprin tablets which affect the products efficacy and stability. While the active ingredient may meet all compendial standards, the methods of manufacture and the formula itself (inactive ingredients) will make a large difference.

Long ago, before the advent of tamper-evident seals on bottles of consumer products, I would open a bottle of store brand aspirin and with cotton intact, sniff the opening. Almost universally, I would detect a strong odor of vinegar (acetic acid). I would also see on many occasions, within the bottle, needle-like crystals of free salicylic acid, the active ingredient in corn/wart removers. This was due to the presence of moisture in the product.

I believe it is the reason why so many people would say, "I can't take aspirin--it upsets my stomach."

My IARU chart shows that 10m is the same in all 3 regions - allocated exclusively to the amateur radio service for 28.0 to 29.7. There are no internationally recognized exceptions to this range (like there are for other bands).

Of course I've heard such tales as well, usually it's "I heard about this guy who knows a guy who..." If your good friend's daughter is doing it, it shuldn't be too hard to find out how she got connected and do the same.

Jim, partly what I said was meant in jest. I would never get involved in that crap. I wouldn't even waste my time asking about it. I do know, his daughter always loved politics and when the Messiah showed up at the University of Cincinnati campus at the Shoemaker Center, he sold the place out.

Many of the young kids had a big part here in the Cincinnati area in changing the SW Ohio area from Republican to Democrat. I could not believe what I saw the night the Messiah was here in the Nati.' You would have sworn that Christ himself had stepped foot here. What a trip.

Good job Mike, I bet you're one happy camper.:-) Congratulations. Maybe give us a report on the BCB reception. Are you going to use a loop with it?

Can-A-D'Oh! Promoting Another Islam-O-Fascist Lie : America the Great Slave Master

The Islamic Slave Trade Existed Before the European Slave Trade and Continues Today wit 18 Million Victims -while- the European Slave Trade {Not just the USA} has ended over a Hundred Years ago and only had 9 Million Victims.
* Some of the European Slave Trade Heritage is African-American Population in the USA
-while- the the Islamic Slave Trade Disgrace is the Non-Existent African-Arab & African-Turkmen populations of the Middle East {Assumed All Dead}. -aka- Death-by-Islam
* Slavery in the USA was not started by the USA -but- by the Europeans and Existed under European Control for about 200 Years.
* Slavery in the USA Ended Because Americans Ended It {Not the Europeans}
* Slavery is still part of Islam : It's a 7th Century

Thing that they have about living in the good old days; where Wives, Children and Slaves were all "Property".

Nah as a Can-A-D'Oh!-ian the only 'choice' you have is to Preach Hate for the USA and Americans. In Canada saying anything else about {aboot} Muslims, Islam, Iraqis, and on

- Actually, your grammatical insertion of the word OF
- makes absolutely no grammatical sense whatsoever.
- Dave's original sentence is at least grammatically feasible.

"One wonders what form [of] thought takes inside that purty little head."

one wonders . . . yes one does

Looks good.

Never had one of those, but I had several other Lloyd's multiband portables. One of them was sold under an amazing number of brand names, including Philco, Realistic, and others. Identical except for case leather color, and in some cases, the metal trim color, gold or silvertone. They seemed to hold up better than the other "off brand" stuff, like Alaron, Arvin, Juliette, and Raliegh. My dad sold almost all the off brands that were around back in the 60's and early 70's.

I had some great CB walkie talkies that had solid aluminum cases on them and they worked great. They sold the same ones, in a different color, at RS, and at Olson in yet another color.

You know what they say, never trust a young conservative or an old liberal. College kids are mentally disposed to be liberal. They have no life experience but think they know everything. Obama was speaking their language.
Why do you think Dems were to dedicated to getting college kids to vote?

"I feel privileged to have the CHOICE offered"
Being a "Canadian" you no longer have a choice. Your funcking government tells you what to think and do. Try and deny that! Muslim muffer!
Canada isn't that far from being a dictatorship with all these Canadian "puppets carrying out the chores of their elected annoited. 50% fucking recent immigrants(within the last 2 years and up.)
As Americans we should slam the border doors on your fucking fingers so no other 911 freaks can come through YOUR borders. If you won't stop them, we will.
Noticed your downtown areas lately. 50% rag heads and I hear by this fall your government wants it to be 65% immigration.
You put those fuckers in politics to help you achieve your 65% goal. Tell me, when was the last time you let in any anglo-saxon white folk? Quite some time!
You's fall for the sick excuse your government hands you that you need immigration to keep the hospitals and education going. Fuck, they're all in the hole now. Kids have to pay in public schools for their books and paper even. Your city garbage dumps are full and I hear your dumping your shit or soon will be into one of the last pure water sites in the world. Your hospitals are bankrupt leaving thousands without adequate emergency care. Fucking Canadians. Lead by your provincial leader, the guy that looks like Howdy Doody. McSquinty is it not?
Fuck off Canadian, you're as bad or worse than the muslim shit you made your bedfellows.

For what it's worth
When it says that the meek
Shall inherit the Earth
Well, I heard that some sheik
Has bought New Jersey last week
'N you suckers ain't gettin' nothin'
Is Hare Rama really wrong
If you wander around With a napkin on
With a bell on a stick
An' your hair is all gone...
(The geek shall inherit nothin')

You say yer life's a bum deal
'N yer up against the wall...
Well, people, you ain't even got no Deal at all
'Cause what they do
In Washington
They just takes care of NUMBER ONE
An' NUMBER ONE ain't YOU
You ain't even NUMBER TWO

Those Jesus Freaks
Well, they're friendly but
The shit they believe
Has got their minds all shut
An' they don't even care
When the church takes a cut Ain't it bleak when you got so much nothin'
(So whaddya do)
Eat that pork

Eat that ham
Laugh till ya choke
On Billy Graham
Moses, Aaron 'n Abraham...
They're all a waste of time
'N it's yer ass that's on the line
(IT'S YER ASS THAT'S ON THE LINE)

Do what you wanna
Do what you will Just don't mess up
Your neighbor's thrill
'N when you pay the bill
Kindly leave a little tip
And help the next poor sucker
On his one way trip...

Nothing strange about it. As you might have heard, English and French are both official languages of Canada, and since CHU is a service operated by a Canadian federal government agency, it must therefore provide that service in both official languages.

There's a reason why your party gets the hypocrite label. If you weren't so deeply in denial, you;d understand why.

Jesus answered a question with a question frequently. It was a integral part of his pitch to the unwashed and to the authorities.

Are you saying Jesus was wrong?

I already know why. People gave that label to the Left, and the Left turned around and tried to plant it on the Right. They've been doing that for some time now with most everything they are accused of. They now say (with a straight face, incredibly) that THEY are the defenders of the Constitution and the Right hates America. It's a simple formula that appeals to the simple

Mike [M II],

Dang Another Clear Indicator of Can-A-D'Oh!-ian Math and World Knowledge {Hysterical Science}

OK so using Can-A-D'Oh!-ian Math the State of California has 1,000,000 {1 Million} Muslims and they are 20.0% of the Population of the State of California.

But the State of California's Population is really around 34 Million Peoples : So 1 Million Muslims would be about 3% of the Population -not- 20.0% http://en.wikipedia.org/wiki/State_of_California

FWIW - Canada has only 32 Million Population and has fewer people than the State of California.

Although the time is UTC I find it more useful to compare my clock with my computer rather than listen to WWV. For most people who doesn't have a way to reset the clock and have a computer provided you have a fresh battery in it, your computer clock can be compared with WWV and WWVH periodically. I use WWV to set my 24 hour clock on my Grundig G4000A periodically and the G4000A as a reference to set all the rest of the clocks in the House. The atomic clocks reference frequncy is a VLF signal from the National Bureau of Standards.If my memory serves me it is in the vicinity of the VLF band that Submarines use for Communcations.

It's like that here in SC with the WHRI transmitters... not real far away but a hard catch, especially at night.

That's because of the skip zones of HF frequencies. Unlike BCB, there is very little ground wave on most of HF, it's all skywave, and the skip zone starts very close to the transmitter.

I can't hear a single numbers station attributed to the Mossad, but I am less than 100 miles from anywhere they could be, probably less than 30.

Microsoft on Wednesday said it has finalized the code, paving the way for the software to make its way onto retail shelves and new PCs in time for its October 22 launch.

The software maker is hoping the response to the new operating system differs from the lukewarm reviews and compatibility challenges that marked the release of Windows Vista, which hit the market in January 2007. In contrast to Vista, Windows 7 has been marked by the company consistently hitting its deadlines and receiving largely positive feedback along the way.

I'm not having any problem as I slowly bring it up in my laptop as I have/take time to work with it!!!

I can't get KVOH, about 20 miles away. Could never hear Delano, either.

The following will put things in a better perspective:

==========
This following poem is composed entirely of actual quotes from George W.
Bush.

Make the Pie Higher

I think we all agree, the past is over.
This is still a dangerous world.
It's a world of madmen
And uncertainty
And potential mental losses.

Rarely is the question asked
Is our children learning?
Will the highways of the internet Become more few?
How many hands have I shaked?

They misunderestimate me.
I am a pitbull on the pantleg of opportunity.
I know that the human being and the fish
Can coexist.

Families is where our nation finds hope
Where our wings take dream.
Put food on your family!
Knock down the tollbooth!
Vulcanize society!
Make the pie higher!
Make the pie higher!

Merits of Islam in Public Rights
I believe that my topic is useful and I would like to share my thoughts.
THANK YOU.

Merits of Islam in Public Rights

1- Islam prohibits encroachment on the creatures of God, whether they are humans, animals or plants.2:190. And fight in the Way of Allâh those who fight you, but transgress not the limits. Truly, Allâh likes not the transgressors.The Prophet (peace and blessings of Allah be upon him) said: “A woman was punished because of a cat which she detained until it died of starvation, because she neither fed it, nor let it free to eat from the vermin of the earth.” The Messenger of Allah (peace and blessings of Allah be upon him) said: ‘Whilst a dog was walking around a well, almost dying of thirst, one of the prostitutes of Bani Israa’eel saw him, took off her shoe, filled it with water and gave him the water. She was forgiven because of that.” Muslim armies were ordered not to kill anyone who was not fighting them, like women, children, the elderly and the priests. They were ordered not to cut trees and not to fill up water wells with dirt.
2- A Muslim must be like a candle illuminating the way for the people for the straight path to be saved them from God’s fire. 3: 110. You [true believers in Islâmic Monotheism, and real followers of Prophet Muhammad and his Sunnah (legal ways, etc.)] are the best of peoples ever raised up for mankind; you enjoin Al-Ma’rûf (i.e. Islâmic Monotheism and all that Islâm has ordained) and forbid Al-Munkar (polytheism, disbelief and all that Islâm has forbidden), and you believe in Allâh. And had the people of the Scripture (Jews and Christians) believed, it would have been better for them; among them are some who have faith, but most of them are Al-Fâsiqûn (disobedient to Allâh - and rebellious against Allâh’s Command).

3- Islam calls for social cooperation and giving the rights to those who deserve them by paying alms and charity.51: 19. And in their properties there was the right of the beggar, and the Mahrûm (the poor who does not ask the others) , 9:60. As-Sadaqât (here it means Zakât/ alms) are only for the Fuqarâ’ (poor), and Al-Masâkin (the poor) and those employed to collect (the funds); and for to attract the hearts of those who have been inclined (towards Islâm); and to free the captives; and for those in debt; and for Allâh’s Cause (i.e. for Mujâhidûn - those fighting in the holy wars), and for the wayfarer (a traveller who is cut off from everything); a duty imposed by Allâh. And Allâh is All-Knower, All-Wise. 17:28. And if you (O Muhammad) turn away from them (kindred, poor, wayfarer, etc. whom We have ordered you to give their rights, but if you have no money at the time they ask you for it) and you are awaiting a mercy from your Lord for which you hope, then, speak unto them a soft kind word (i.e. Allâh will give me and I shall give you).

4- Islam orders compassion and charity to the poor, the needy, the relatives, the neighbors and the wayfarers.4: 36. Worship Allâh and join none with Him in worship, and do good to parents, kinsfolk, orphans, Al-Masâkin (the poor), the neighbour who is near of kin, the neighbour who is a stranger, the companion by your side, the wayfarer (you meet), and those (slaves) whom your right hands possess. Verily, Allâh does not like such as are proud and boastful;

5- Islam imposes fasting the whole month of Ramadan to make Muslims experience the poor people’s deprivation, therefore sympathize with them by giving them charity.2:183. O you who believe! Observing As-Saum (the fasting) is prescribed for you as it was prescribed for those before you, that you may become Al-Muttaqûn (the pious).

6- Islam warns against taking money from the orphans, or spending it needlessly.4: 2.And give unto orphans their property and do not exchange (your) bad things for (their) good ones; and devour not their substance (by adding it) to your substance. Surely, this is a great sin. 6:152. "And come not near to the orphan’s property, except to improve it, until he (or she) attains the age of full strength; and give full measure and full weight with justice. We burden not any person, but that which he can bear. And whenever you give your word (i.e. judge between men or give evidence, etc.), say the truth even if a near relative is concerned, and fulfill the Covenant of Allâh, This He commands you, that you may remember.

7- Wealth is a gift from Allah, none has the right to feel superior to others because they are wealthier than them, so Islam calls for treating the rich and the poor in the same manner.80: 1.The Prophet (peace and blessings of Allah be upon him) frowned and turned away,2. Because there came to him the blind man (i.e. ‘Abdullâh bin Umm-Maktûm, who came to the Prophet (peace and blessings of Allah be upon him) while he was preaching to one or some of the Quraish chiefs).3. But what could tell you that per chance he might become pure (from sins)?

Don't miss Ricky, Julian, and Bubbles (Robb Wells, John Paul Tremblay, and Mike Smith) on Jimmy Kimmel Live tomorrow night!
www.trailerparkboys.com

I know a Michael Smith guy, he is a General at www.army.mil
He was in the 114th Aviation Company with me in Vietnam.One time (via email) when himself and I were chatting back and forth, I reminded him about that time he backed a truck into one of those tall light post and knocked it flat on the ground.Ever since then, he wont say anything to me anymore.One time he said when he left New Jersey, he never looked back!

Even more racist crap.

When will you stop this ranting and get a life?

Better still, why don't you start practicing the Christian faith?

You claim to be Christian, but I sure don't see ANY sign of it, only hate, revenge and fear mongering.

The best way to show the value of your faith is to show how it's practiced and to live it properly.

What you show is NOT Christianity.

They trafficked in human kidneys, too, probably cut out of white slave trade victims.

Federal prosecutors said the investigation initially focused on a money laundering network that operated between Brooklyn, NY; Deal, NJ; and Israel. The network is alleged to have laundered tens of millions of dollars through Jewish charities controlled by rabbis in New York and New Jersey.

Prosecutors then used an informant in that investigation to help them go after corrupt politicians. The informant - a real estate developer charged with bank fraud three years ago - posed as a crooked businessman and paid a string of public officials tens of thousands of dollars in bribes to get approvals for buildings and other projects in New Jersey, authorities said.

Among the 44 people arrested were the mayors of Hoboken, Ridgefield and Secaucus, Jersey City's deputy mayor, and two state assemblymen. A member of the governor's cabinet resigned after agents searched his home, though he was not arrested. All but one of the officeholders are Democrats.

Now that Walter Cronkite has passed I still find him to be the only newscaster that I can trust.
